FOREWARD

It is hoped that this book will be of value to all descendants of Thomas, whether they spell their name MINER or MINOR; whether their names have been included or not.

If not here, and they are members of Thomas' family, early ancestors more than likely will be found with diligence and, frankly, plain hard work. Each day as the book neared completion, new material arrived either by letter or telephone. Right up to the last possible moment, new discoveries were made which tied additional families to the line of descent. Several lines, long sought after by researchers, were uncovered and included in a genealogy for the first time.

Many lines, unfortunately, remain to be clarified and so course could not be included. This book, together with its predecessor, THE LYON'S WHELPS, has been about twenty years in the making. Such an effort is, of course, never "finished." Many more lines will in time be proven only to await another genealogy of the descendants of Thomas.

This book incorporates basic genealogical material covered in my earlier book, "THE LYON'S WHELPS." That material has been carefully edited and, added to the wealth of new information gathered over the past twelve years, has developed into a genealogy covering nearly 9,000 descendants of Thomas.

In "THE LYON'S WHELPS", I followed separately each of Thomas's five sons who married and had children. In this new work, rather than separate the lines of each son into separate sections, I have chosen to blend them together as one great family.

This book would have been far more complete, I believe, had I been able to follow female lines through to the present. However, when one considers that in following male lines with about 9,000 descendants involved, one can readily imagine the volume of work involved in attempting to follow several thousand separate family names. This fact, I know, will disappoint a number of people and I am truly sorry. I wish it could be otherwise.

The numbering system in this new work remains the same and should be easy to follow. Note that each descendant who is being carried forward has his name typed in capitol letters. Simply follow his number further along in the book.

PREFACE

"Thomas Minor was a prominent example of those men, who with their families, came to this country and fulfilled the purpose of time in creating in the New World a people of illimitable resources, jealous of personal rights, with brawny arms and fertile brain and with the unconquerable perserverance so characteristic of the pioneer settlers who attacked the forces of nature's wilderness that a nation might be built for the world to respect."

So noted the men who were responsible for the printing of Thomas' diary, an important early, day-by-day accounting of the history of his community from the year 1653 to 1684. Not unlike others covering the life of Thomas, they noted that "Thomas came from Somersett County, England, on the good ship Arbella, which landed at Salem, Massachusetts, the 14th day of June 1630."

Though there have been no records available anywhere to lend credence to these "facts", it can only be assumed that the several references made by Thomas in his diary to the personal relationship he had with John Winthrop, Jr., led everyone to what must have been an obvious conclusion. Over the years, I, too, had conveniently "followed the leader."

Then came Banks' "The Planters of the Commonwealth," a compilation of the ships which carried passengers to the New World in those early days. The page in Banks' book which details this story is reproduced elsewhere in this book. In brief, he notes as follows:

> "Lyons Whelp, John Gibbs Master sailed from Gravesend April 25, 1629, with about forty planters out of the Countyes of Dorset and Somerset, and arrived at Salem in the middle of July. She brought 6 fisherman from Dorchester." Last on the passenger list is "Thomas Miner, 22, of Chew Magna, County Somerset. - - Charlestown."

In titling my earlier genealogy "THE LYON'S WHELPS," I honored what I termed then "a lion of a man" and five of his sons.

This new book no less honors Thomas and his sons. More, however, it attempts to recognize his many descendants who, each in his own way, endeavored to live his life as fully as he could. Some left a mark in time which will long be remembered. Others, not unlike most of us, were simply ordinary folk and most, honorable, loving, hard working citizens.

May each of us, whatever our station in life, find enrichment and a sense of satisfaction in knowing that we are indeed "the whelps of the lion," descendants of Thomas Minor of Chew Magna and Stonington. It is a great heritage of which we all should be justly proud.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Those who have developed genealogical material in the past ease the path for those who follow. To those earlier researchers, many of whom are now gone, I express due appreciation.

Acknowledged with gratitude is the assistance of the hundreds of descendants of Thomas across the country and in Canada who labored long, hard hours to help provide so much of the material which made this book possible.

An important note: with material for this book coming from many diverse sources, the specter of error is always present. Also, the matter of proper spelling of names and places is always a concern when so much material is provided in long-hand. We have diligently endeavored to exercise care in all aspects of the preparation of this book. We are aware that some errors have crept in and are sorry. Hopefully, as one of our relatives noted facetiously, they are minor.

Among the group providing much of the material for this book are several individuals who labored long hours in research beyond their own family lines. To each, I express my most grateful thanks:

Mrs. Joyce Calvillo, Mrs. Frances Leahy, Miss Ethel McGrath, Dr. Richard K. Miner, Mr. Robert F. Miner, Mr. Carl Wilbur Minor, Mr. Ralph W. Muncy, Mr. Carl E. Rhodes, and Mrs. Gerald C. Ward.

Special acknowledgment must be made to other individuals to whom I owe deep appreciation. The burden of proofreading, numbering, and especially, indexing, was greatly eased through the gracious effort of friends and immediate family and I thank each one of them. I am especially grateful to Mrs. Ellen Newton and my wife, Peggy Jane.

To Mrs. Mary C. Shurts, who picked me up and carried me through some most trouble - some material, I owe my most heartfelt thanks.

One friend has been especially helpful through her patience and understanding over the many months in which I was closeted with the preparation of this book. To my wife, Peggy Jane, goes my enduring gratitude.

DEDICATION

To the parishiners of St. Andrews Church, Chew Magna, England, and their Vicar, John Barker, who so graciously and warmly welcomed descendants of Thomas Minor on the occasion of their pilgrimage to Thomas' ancestral home in September 1979 -

This book is gratefully dedicated.

THE ENGLISH BEGINNINGS

"MYNOR, MINOR OR MINER"

THE ENGLISH BEGINNINGS -- "MYNOR, MINOR OR MINER"

Thomas Minor, the pioneer of our name in America, asked a genealogical question not very much unlike those asked by his descendants ten generations later. His main concern, however, was simple and on the face of it, uncomplicated -- the correct spelling of his surname.

The question was a good one, as those of us who have read copies of early family deeds will attest. The name, especially in Thomas' day, was variously spelled -- MYNOR, MINOR, MINER. For example, in April 1654, Thomas purchased a piece of land from a Cary Latham. The deed of transfer spelled his name MYNOR. Other deeds spell it MINOR, or MINER.

Six years before Thomas' death, this question apparently became a matter for discussion in the family. So far as Thomas was concerned, the answer could only come from "home." So in the year 1684, Thomas sent a letter to his place of birth requesting information as to the correct spelling of his surname.

More will be said later regarding Thomas. However, the material he received in response to his inquiry furnishes us with the only available information as to the English beginnings of the family. The manuscript, a scroll on parchment entitled "An Herauldical Essay upon the Surname of Miner," is on deposit today in the Connecticut Historical Society, in Hartford.

It is interesting to note two changes in that manuscript, recently uncovered. First, with reference to William who married Isabella Harcope, it has been learned that she was Isabella Pole whose first husband was H. de Frolibay. She was a daughter of John de la Pole. (Reference pp. 1875 and 1876 of Wurt's Magna Charta).

Second, in his lecture in Chew Magna, September, 1979, before the meeting of Thomas's descendants gathered there, Roger Ashley, Chew Magna historian, noted that Thomas (our Thomas) was the youngest of nine children. The scroll Thomas received from England about 1685 noted that Clement, Thomas' father, had four children, Thomas being the second child. Further reference to this discovery is to be found in the remarks of Roger Ashley, located under the appendix section of the book.

The manuscript to which I have referred above, reads as follows:

"It is more praiseworthie in noble and excellent things to know something, though little, than in mean and ignoble things to have a perfect knowledge. Amongst all those rare ornaments of the mind of man, heraldic hath had a most eminent place, and hath been held in high esteem, not only at one time and in one climate, but during all times, and through those parts of the world where any ray of Humanitie and Civilitie hath shined, for without it all would be drowned in the chaos of disorder. Neither is she so partial, that money shall make the man. For he ought not to be accounted a perfect Herauld except that he can discern the difference betwixt a coat armoriall, obtained by valour, or purchased by money. -Sentum Gentilium Palludamentum Cistatanus- honorable not mercenary, as appears by the coat of the Miners. The reason (as Garcilaseo Sayeth, page 432) is this. Edward, the third, going to make warre against the French, took a progress through Somersett, and coming to Mendippi Colles minerary. Mendippi Hills in Somersett, where lived Henry, a miner whose surname was Bullman, his name being taken rather a denominatione soci et ab officia, who with all carefulness and loyaltie, having convened his Domestics and menial Servants, armed with Battle Axes, proffered himself and them to his master's service, making up a complete hundred. Wherefore he had his coat armorial (Gules) signifying Minius, red--another demonstration of the original of the surname -a Fesse id est cingulum militare- because obtained by valour, betwixt three plates, argent, crest, a battle axe armed at both ends, another demonstration of the original of the arms, for there could be no plates without Mines. It is folly to suppose such a surname as Minor to have any coat of arms, it being contrary, yea, contradictory in terms, that Minor can obtain paternal coats or achievements, unless it be presupposed that Major was his father. Bartas, a French Herauld, says Miner is a word contracted in Dutch, MIN-HEIR, that is my master or Lord, and gives his reason for the plates to be dollars or pieces of Eight, abundance of which will make Hollander (albeit born upon a dunghill) to be titled Mein-heir, but ye crest reason aforesaid, and Chronologie proves the first, and albeit Heraulds differ in the Describing (says Fordon, page 342) of this surname, Miner, and time, with the various dialects of several counties, have almost made it to be another name, yet if ignorance would strive to eradicate Ancestrie, it can not do it in this coat, the name and colours making so much proof with the place (says Baker). 1st, the place where the original came from; Mendippi Colles Minerary. 2d, by the field, Minius. 3d, by the charge Minerall. 4th, by the circumstances and actions upon record, relative to the crest, being a battle-axe armed at both ends Minerall. Herauldy is a thing not of yesterday, or which may be otherways found out, being already condescended upon by all nations, and as it were established, Jure Centium, among the Greeks, Romans, Germans, French, Spaniards, English, Scots, Danes and Hungarians, &c. Fridon, the great Antiquarian sayeth that the King's Secretary returned the foresaid Henry Miner a compliment for his Loyaltie in these words -Oceanus quamvis magniflury multique torrentes sint ei stipendary. Non de dignatur recipere minares Riviloso id est- The Ocean (though great rivers pay him tribute) disdains not also to receive the Lesser, if Loyal Brooks, which by one only urne pour themselves into its bosom.

This Henry died in the year 1359, leaving behind him Henry, Edward, Thomas and George Miner, of whom little is to be said, save as only that Henry married one Henrietta Hicks, daughter of Edward Hicks, of Gloucester, of whom as appears by the paling of their arms, are the Hicks of Beverston Castle, in Gloucester, descended, and had issue, William and Henry.

William married one Hobbs, of Wiltshire, and had issue, Thomas and George. Henry, the 2d son, served Richard the second, in the year 1384. Thomas, in 1399, married one Miss Gressleys, daughter of Cotton, in the Countie of Stafford, and had issue, Lodovick, George and Mary. Lodovick married Anna Dyer, daughter of Thomas Dyer, of Stoughton, in the Countie of Huntington, and had issue, Thomas, born 1436, and after that twins, being twenty-two years after ye birth of the said Thomas, and the twins, George and Arthur, who both served the House of Austria, the younger married (as Phillipe Comins relates) one Henrietta de la Villa Odorosa. Thomas married Bridget, second daughter to Sir George Hervie de St. Martins, in County Middlesex, and died 1480, leaving his son William and daughter Anna Miner in tutorage to their mother, Bridget, who she resigned to her father, and turned to a Monasterial life in Dutford, where she remained during the remainder of her life. William married Isabella Hartope de Frolibay, and lived to revenge the death of the two young Princes murdered in the Tower of London, upon their inhuman uncle, Richard the 3d. It was said of this William Miner, that he was Flos Militioe, the flower of chivalrie. He left behind him ten sons, William, George, Thomas, Robert, Nathaniel and John; the rest are not recorded. The two last went over to Ireland, in 1541, when King Henry the 8th was proclaimed 1st King of Scotland. Nathaniel married one Fitzmorris neigh Caterburgh, in the province of Leinster, in Ireland. John married Joselina O'Bryan, daughter of Teig O'Bryan, of _____, in County of Clare, whose posteritie remain there in the name of Miner, bearing the same coat. George married and lived in Shropshire, Thomas in Hereford. William, the eldest son, had issue Clement and Elizabeth Miner, and was buried at Chew Magna, the 23 day of February, Anno Domini 1585, and lies interred in the Priests' chancel, about four feet from the wall, with this inscription:

HERE ,, ETH ,,,,,, M
MYNER ,,, OF ,,, PSH
OBYT IRMFERRU MDLXXXV

This and no more is legible upon the stone, with the coat expressed in the margin (at the † signe) but by the Records and Registry of said church it is evident that his name was William Myner, they both agreeing in the same date and place, and must needs have been the head of the same family, as by the paternal coat of arms clearly appear.

Clement, his son, succeeded his father in Heritage, and married, and had issue, Clement, Thomas, Elizabeth and Mary Miners, and departed this life the 31st of March, 1640, and lies interred in Chew Magna, in the County of Somersett. Clement, the eldest brother, married Sarah Pope, daughter of John Pope, of Norton, Small Reward, in the County of Somersett, and had issue, William and Israel. This Clement was buried at Burslington, County of Somersett, and Thomas, his brother, is now (in 1683) alive at Stonington, Connecticut Colony, in New England, Anno Domini 1683, and has issue, John, Thomas, Clement, Manassah, Ephraim and Judah Miners, and two daughters, Marie and Elizabeth. William Miner, eldest son of Clement Miner, 2d, married Sarah, daughter of John Batting, of Clifton, in Gloucestershire, and lives, Anno Domini, 1683, in Christmas street, in the city of Bristol, and has issue, William and Sarah. Israel, the second son, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Jones, of Burslington, in County of Somersett, and had issue, Clement, Thomas, Sarah, Jean and Elizabeth, Anno Domini 1683.

And if I have used any old or ancient words, yea, words differently now Syllibicated, I may excuse myself with Quintialiaum Verbosa restuetate repetites non solume maquis assentores aliquam non sine de lulatonant, and for the ingenuous reader I am not that every Peasant should venture his sick-brained opinion upon this essay, knowing well that asy neminem habet inimicume praetor ignorantum, but if he will take counsel (an illegible Greek quotation here follows, translated by the author to mean, "If thou hast no taste for learning, meddle no more with what thou understandeth not,") and keeping himself silent, he may pass for a wit, while on the contrary, his too much garrulity shows his nakedness as much as Prester John, who describes himself fromes Logues of Solomon, or Fishulf from a seth; but I shall be very much beholden to the learned reader, who, if he can give more satisfaction in the essay, would, for the honor of antiquitie (who now lies in profundo Democratis Putio) mind the Errata chronologically, and see if he can derive the surname from a longer time, it being supposed that Henry Miner's name before the King's progress into Somersett was Bullman, but how certain, however, I know not, but leave it to some other, whose experience and learning exceed mine. Desiring nothing more than that Heraldie should be restored to its pristine splendor and truth, and not be abused by every common painter and plasterer, who, before he will lose a fee, will fansie a coat of arms to the loss of their estates and goods, and sometimes their very names.

Quid non mortalium pectora coginis aure Sacra Fames?

Emblemata ad voluntatem Domini Riges sunt portanda et non alius andi Heraldie, stands in need of the dose gaperapsusys, and now I will conclude with Ralph Brooks, Esquire, and York Heraldie.

To make these names alive again appear,
Which in oblivion well nigh buried were,
That so your children may avoid the jarres,
Which might arise about their ancestors;

And the living might those titles see
With which these names and houses honored be,
Yet I have hope of more acceptance from
Those future times that after we shall come.
For when beneath the stroke of death I fall,
And those that live these lines examine shall,
Detraction dying, you that do remain
Will credit me and thank me for my pains.
Very--si quid nodisti rectius

This coat of the Miners of Chew, I attest to be entered at Bath, in Somersett, by Clarenceux, the 4th of King James the first, which visitation is in custody of me, 1606.

CHARLESTOWN AND STONINGTON

AND DESCENDANTS

THOMAS OF CHARLESTOWN AND STONINGTON

Thomas Minor was born at Chew Magna, Somersett County, England, on 23 April 1608. He embarked for the Colonies aboard the Lyon's Whelp, sailing from Gravesend, England on 25 April 1629, and arrived at Salem, Massachusetts in the middle of July 1629.

Very shortly after his arrival in Salem (then called Pequot Harbor), there was a serious outbreak of Typhus, and Thomas moved on to Watertown. His stay there was brief also; from Watertown, Thomas moved on to Charlestown where in 1632 he became a founder of the First Church, his name appearing 34th on the roll. Two years later he was granted four acres of land at the line of Newtown (now Cambridge), and by 1637 owned a 10 acre plot.

On 4 March 1633/34, Thomas was made a freeman, and on 23 April 1634 he married Grace Palmer, daughter of Walter Palmer of Charlestown. Two years later in 1636 the young couple moved once again settling in Hingham, Massachusetts, where they remained until 1645. Thomas' first child, John, was baptized in 1635 before they moved to Hingham. During their years in Hingham, their sons Clement, Thomas, Ephraim and Joseph were born.

In 1645 Thomas joined John Winthrop Jr.'s colony of Massachusetts Puritans in the settlement of New London, Conn. In 1649 Thomas was appointed "Military Sargeant in the towne of Pequett" with power to call forth and train the male inhabitants. In 1650 Thomas Minor and Jonathan Brewster were made the first deputies to the General Court (the Legislature) from Pequot (now New London).

During the years that Thomas lived in New London, his son Manassah and his daughters Ann and Mary were born. Manassah was the first white male child born in New London.

In 1652 Thomas moved to Pawcatuck, now Stonington, Conn., became a cofounder of the town with three associates; William Chesebrough, Thomas Stanton, and his father-in-law Walter Palmer. On the grounds of Wequetequock Cemetery there is a monument honoring these four men.

In Stonington Thomas built a house on land granted to him, which he later relinquished to Walter Palmer, there having been some confusion during which time the same land was also granted to someone else who sold it to Mr. Palmer.

Thomas then bought some land situated on Quiambaug Cove from Cary Latham about 1653. In his diary, Thomas tells of his building of his house at Quiambaug. His first published month, November 1653, and the following month, December of the same year, indicate very clearly his life in Stonington. During the following months, one can follow the building of his home: "I had 9 peeces to hew", "I made an end of hewing of timber", "goodman redfild was making our backe for our Chimbloy and wensday the 22nd our backe of our Chimbly was ended goodman Redfild has 22 s and 6 d for doing the stone walle", "I had newly raised my roofe of my house".

In Stonington Thomas served as deputy to the Connecticut General Court in May and October, 1665; October, 1667; October, 1670; October, 1672; May, 1677; May and October, 1679; May, 1680; and October, 1689. He was appointed Chief Military Officer of the Mystic Trainband in July, 1685. During King Philip's war Thomas served as a Lieutentant and was referred to that title in February and in April of 1676. In August, 1676, he was called Captain, although in later years he usually is mentioned as Lieutenant.

By Colonial appointment in May of 1649, Thomas Minor served as Magistrate or Justice, in the town of New London, and in the town of Stonington in October, 1664, and in May of 1665. He also held various other positions of trust and honor. In his diary one can read: "This 24th of Aprill, 1669, I Thomas Minor am by my accounts sixtie one yeares ould I was by the towne & this yeare Chosen to be a select man the Townes Tresurer The Townes Recorder The Brander of horses by the generale Courte Recorded the head officer of the Traine band by the same Courte one of the ffoure that have the charge of the milishcia of the whole Countie and Chossen and sworne Commissinor and one to assist in keeping the Countie Courte".

In May, 1666, Thomas received a Colonial grant of 100 acres of land and in October, 1667, 50 acres more; such grants were made to those who had performed distinguished public service. His last two children, Samuel and Hannah, were born 4 March 1652 and 15 Sept 1655, respectively.

Thomas died in Stonington, Conn. on 23 Oct 1690. He is buried in Wequetequock Cemetery, his grave covered by a "wolfstone", consisting of a large granite slab which it is said he selected for the purpose from his own field. On one side of the stone an inscription reads: "Here lyeth the body of Lieutenant Thomas Minor, aged 83 years. Departed 1690". His wife, Grace, died 31 December 1690 and is buried beside Thomas, the opposite side of the stone being inscribed for her.

Of his ten children, Thomas had descendants from sons John, Clement, Ephraim, Joseph, and Manassah and from his daughter Hannah. His other children, Thomas, Ann, Mary and Samuel all died young without issue.

2. Capt. JOHN (THOMAS), born probably in Charlestown, Mass., baptized 30 August 1635; son of Thomas, and Grace Palmer; married Elizabeth Booth 14 October 1658. She was daughter of Richard Booth of Stratford, Conn.

John was in part educated by the Colony as a missionary and interpreter for the Indians in the many troubles and treaties with them. In 1658, he moved to Stratford, Conn. where he married and raised a large family. He served ten years as Town Clerk and was a leading figure in the community. A large difference of religious opinions arising in the church of which he was a Deacon, he along with a number of others, requested the General Court to grant them a tract of land where they might locate a new settlement. Gov. Winthrop, affected with the unhappy controversy and animosities subsisting in the town, advised that Mr. Walker (the clergyman representing the group opposed to Israel Chauncy, the other clergyman involved in this religious controversy) and his church and people should remove, and that a tract of land for the settlement of a new town should be granted for their encouragement and accommodation. Accordingly, we find on record, 9 May 1672, the following grant:

"This Court grants Mr. Sam'll Sherman, Lnt. Wm. Curtice, Ens: Joseph Jordan and John Minor, themselves and associates, liberty to erect a plantation at Pomperoage, provided it doeth not prejudice any former grant to any other plantation or perticuler person; provided any other honest inhabitants of Stratford have liberty to joyne with them in settling there, and that they enterteine so many inhabitants as the place will conveniently interteine, and that they settle there within the space of three yeares."

The grant was made in May, too late in the season to move families and settle in for the winter to come so a few men went to the area where they raised corn and secured it in log cribs. When they returned the next spring they found that either animals or Indians had rifled them of their contents.

Early the next spring, the group headed out for the wilderness of Pomperaug. They were directed to follow the Pootatuck, or Great River, till they came to a large river flowing into it from the north. They were to follow up this stream about eight miles, where they would reach a large open plain on the river which had previously been under the rude cultivation of the Indians.

They accordingly commenced their journey and, arriving at the Pomperaug, they thought it too small a stream to answer the description and so continued their journey to the Shepaug River. Though it was scarcely larger than the first, they concluded to ascend it. After they had gone the prescribed distance, they found themselves in rugged, mountainous country, not at all like the description given them.

They perceived they had somehow passed their objective and so re-traced their steps by another route arriving on Good Hill, they perceived the valley of the Pomperaug lying below in solitude and silence, the spot where Woodbury now stands. The sight so delighted the group after their fatiguing journey that John is said to have knelt down and return thanks to God.

John was Town Clerk of Woodbury for about thirty years and its representative in the General Court for about twenty years. John died at Woodbury 17 Sept. 1719. His widow died 24 Oct. 1732.

Children: born in Stratford, Conn.

3. Lieutenant CLEMENT (THOMAS), the second son of Thomas, and Grace Palmer, was baptized in Hingham, Mass. 4 March 1638 and went to Nameaug (New London, Conn.) in 1658 with his father's family. When his father moved from New London to Quiambog and Togwonk in Stonington, Clement remained behind and became a permanent resident. He received a grant of land near to that of Walter Palmer's whose land it abutted on the south. In Sept. 1669, Clement applied for a house lot next to that of Grace Chappell. He was a very active man and held many public offices in the town. He was a lieutenant in the Militia which was a considerable honor in his day. In the records of New London, Clement is mentioned as "Deacon" or Ensign," but the record of his appointment as Ensign has not been found.

In Oct. 1692, and in May 1696, Clement served as a Deputy for New London in the Connecticut General Court. On April 30 1691, he joined the First Congregational Church at New London. It is thought that his election to the office of Deacon was soon after the death of Deacon Hough, 10 August 1683. Shortly after this date, the Pastor, Rev. Bradstreet, died, and this probably explains why no record of Clement's election of the Deaconate was made. At a town meeting on 19 December 1683, Clement and several others formed a committee to seek advice in securing a minister for the town to replace Rev. Bradstreet. Ensign Clement was one of those appointed to assign seats in the meeting house. He saw service in King Philip's war.

Deacon Clement married, 1st, Frances Burcham Willey 26 November 1662. She was daughter of Edward Burcham of Lynn, Mass. and widow of Isaac Willey, Jr. who died August 1662. She died 6 December 1672, and Clement married, 2nd, Martha Wellman 20 February 1673. She was born in 1652 and died in New London 5 July 1681, daughter of William Wellman and Elizabeth Spencer. Clement married, 3rd, Joanna _____ who died 10 October 1700. Clement died 8 October 1700 and is buried in the Old Burying Yard in New London with a plain, rough shaped granite stone lying flat on a foundation, marked simply, "C M 1700."

He was liberally educated and graduated as a physician at the age of 21. He removed to Norfolk, Litchfield Co., Conn. about 1760. He was complained of in the Presbyterian Church (of which both he and his wife were members) of holding heretical opinions. After a long trial he was excommunicated. He wrote and published a pamphlet in his defense about 1777, called "Miner's Plea."

The following winter was known as "the cold winter," in which the troops under General Washington suffered such hardships at Valley Forge. Dr. Miner had built a new house and used the old one for fuel. He had often talked of emigrating south on account of the climate. The severity of that winter, together with the church difficulty, decided him, and in the spring of 1778 he sold his property. The night before leaving home he took his daughter Anna on his knee and sang her a song called the "Friar." In the morning he embraced his wife, kissed his children and bade them to be good until his return. He rode away on horseback, his money sewn into his saddlebag. His destination was Charleston, S.C. He stopped off in New York City to visit his father and was never heard from again.

He later settled in Fayette Co., Penn. where he died in Uniontown 19 January 1826. His will is on file there. He is buried in the Old Baptist Cemetery at Uniontown. Part of his childhood was lived at Winchester, Virginia, as the records show that his father and mother were there in 1749 and 50. After the death of his father in 1750, his mother took her children to Maryland where she spent several years. Eventually, Samuel returned to the area he knew in New Jersey. It was there he met and married Anna. Samuel appears in the census of men fit to fight in The Revolutionary War from New Jersey. Most of his children (probably all of them) were born in New Jersey. Although he and his family were residents of New Jersey during the war period, it is thought he was the Samuel Minor who served as private in the war with the Penn. troops. In the year 1795, he deeds land to Joshua Ely in New Jersey (AT:507). He appears in Union Township, Fayette Co., Penn. in the land records in 1809. His brothers William and John and mother, Athaliah, had already been in western Penn. for many years, his brother, John, being the first white settler in Greene County. Several of Samuel's children had married in New Jersey and went to the Uniontown area of Fayette County with their families, apparently at, or about, the same time as Samuel. The land patent is in the name of Samuel and his son, Isaac, 1809. He sold land to his son-in-law, Richard Kerwood, at New Geneva, Fayette County in 1813. Samuel was a stockholder of the first bank in Uniontown, "The Union Bank of Penn."

John and Cassandra were buried in the Old Cemetery in Greensboro and he later was removed to the Monongahela Hill Cemetery. Jane is buried in the old Presbyterian Cemetery of Greensboro. John died 5 December 1833. John lived for awhile in Maryland before entering service, moved from there in 1776 to Washington, now Greene Co., Pa., settling on Whiteley Creek. He resided there until the spring of 1832 when he moved to Greensboro. When called into service, he lived on a farm on Whiteley Creek and held the appointment of Captain, having been ordered out by Col. 356. THOMAS (SAMUEL, EPHRAIM, EPHRAIM, THOMAS), born 25 November 1745; son of Samuel, and Esther Gallup Miner; married Eleanor Lamb of New London, Conn. in 1765. During the summer of 1764, Thomas, a sailor shipping out of New London, Conn., had just returned to port from a voyage to The Gold Coast of Africa. Shortly after leaving his ship, he was approached by an old man who offered to sell him a whole township of wild land in the state of New Hampshire (he had purchased all of the land owned by the original grantees). For some time Thomas had thought of giving up the sea and the proposal appealed to him. He did not have funds to buy all the land but agreed to buy half. Thomas thought a good deal about what he had done and went to his Captain and told his story. The Captain told him he'd never see the land nor his money. He was quite discouraged and so returned to the sea once again. Upon his return, which preceded the birth of a son, Thomas told his wife he was going to see his New Hampshire land. Using the money he had earned on his last voyage, he, together with his wife and child, started out for the wilderness. Keeping close to the Connecticut River as a guide, and after many long and weary days, they arrived in Hanover. The first question he asked was, "Is there a town hereabouts callaed Canaan?" "Yes", came the answer, "it's down in the woods 18 miles and there are no roads." After two days rest, they again set out and, following blazed trees, they found their land. The search took several days. They knew they had arrived when they saw a hugh hemlock in the bark of which was carved the word "Canaan." He soon had built a crude hut and they settled down for their first night in Canaan. They stayed and eventually prospered. But they wanted settlers around them. Thomas wrote to a dozen of his former shipmates, offering them 100 acres as a gift; nine accepted. Thomas lived to see the town he had purchased from a stranger on a seaport street grow into a community with three churches, an academy, and a population exceeding 1,500 persons. The ex-tar was elected to the state legislature for 30 consecutive years. The child the Miner's had carried into the forest was educated at Dartmouth College and became an eminent physician in Canada. Thomas died in Canaan 12 July 1827. Eleanor died 17 July 1815.

one. They lived there awhile and moved to another place eight miles away. A few years later they moved into the "Northwest Territory," which was northeastern Ohio. John's brother, Justice, and his family accompanied them. They had to take all of their goods as well as families on horseback. They began their preparations the year before. Apple seeds as well as seeds of all kinds were saved and dried. Loraine's health declined and not long after their son, John Rice, was born, she died of consumption in 1801. After Loraine died, John moved his brood still deeper into the wilderness to within one and a half miles of his brother, Justice.

John had built a cabin with few necessities. The day of July 29, 1804 had been very hot and oppressive. About mid-afternoon signs of an approaching storm became evident. The children were brought inside. The shutters on the windows and the door were shut as the storm broke. It proved to be the most severe tornado that part of Ohio had seen. John, anxious to see what was going on, unbarred the door and leaned out to look around. Just at that moment a great tree limb, hurled through the air by the wind, struck him on the back of the neck, killing him instantly. Polly went to her father immediately but could do nothing for him. Polly was in her 13th year. Her little sister was 7 and their brother, 3 years old. She put them side by side in their chairs and told them to stay there while she went for help. She pulled her father's feet outside the door, shut it tightly, and started out. Great trees lay up-rooted across the path and she could hardly make out the trail. It was nearly dusk when she saw the light in her uncle's cabin. She was soon telling her sorrowful tale. Justice, with several men and Polly to guide them, returned to John's cabin. It was nearly a week before the trail could be cleared sufficiently for family and friends to get to the cabin for John's burial. Polly continued her studies. She began teaching school at age 15. Polly cared for her two younger sisters and brother until they finally went out on their own.

Ebenezer, and Betsey Rowley; married Rachel Anna Ames, daughter of Benajah Ames, 4 March 1784. This, by his own account: "My parents Ebenezer and Betsey Miner lived with her parents till I was in my seventh year, and her father having a large family and under low circumstances, my family sent me to live with my grandfather where I lived nearly three years. My grandfather being out of health and unable to manage his business, moved to his son-in-law Manassas Leith in New London, at which time I returned to my parents, remained a few months and in the spring of 1772, being in the 10th year of my age, went to live with Mr. Moses Noyes where I lived for 5 years and returned to my parents.

I tarried a few days and then went to live with Mr. Seth Lee at Lyme. With my father's concent, I agreed to live with him until I was 21 years of age. I served him faithfully except so much of the time I was in the Continental Service 1780. I was drafted into the State Service to go to Horse Neck for three months; and not liking to go to the State Service I enlisted into the Continental Service for six months under Lieut. Jchabod Spencer and marched to the headquarters of General Washington's Army, which then lay at The Fishkill in New York State and then joined Col. Stow's Regiment, Huntington's Brigade in The 7th Company commanded by Richard Sill of Lyme, Conn., and served the full time of six months, and was discharged with honor - - returned to my old master, worked with him until September 1781, when the British came into New London and burnt the majority of the town, and the alarm was given and the militia was called out in to Town, and I for one, and these were drafted for two months; served the time out and returned to my old master's again and worked with him till spring, 1782; and then I enlisted into the Continental Service for six months - - served my country that campaign very agreeably, got my discharge and west back to my master's house . . . On Christmas Day, joined my comrades in the diversion of shooting squirrels. It was a sorrowful day . . . our amoneshon was gone and we cut down the tree where the squirrel was; it fell and broke another which fell on me. It broke several bones and I was confined to the house about five months.

In the time of my apprenticeship I became acquainted with a young woman and soon after my time ran out with my master, I married her."

They went out on the search for cheap land. They went from Lyme, Conn. on horseback with their goods tied to the pillion of the saddle, their only trail an uncertain route a bridle path by blazed trees. They arrived in The Colony of New Hampshire 1 October 1784 and pitched first in Lempster, N.H. where the first two children were born. Soon after, they moved about three miles away and there reared a family of ten children.

Their first house was of logs. Charles cut the logs in the woods, fastened a chain around them, put a stick in the hands of his young son, Benajah Ames, to drive them to the place of deposit. Being too young to unhook the chains, his mother did so and headed the team back for the woods again and so grew up the house.

Charles died at Lempster, N.H. 24 May 1840. Rachel, his widow, went to live with her son, Ezra, at Walpole, N.H., where she had in her possession the original walking staff of Thomas Minor. The family noted that "there is a strip of Buckskin through it to hang it by about $\frac{1}{4}$ inch wide, said to have been there when it came. It has been handed down from generation to generation and at this writing, September 16th 1881 is the property of widow Lydia Miner, relect of Gardner Miner, deceased, of Weston, Mass."

Thomas' walking staff was last in the possession of Donald Miner, great, great, grandson of Charles and Rachel Miner who, on 18 November 1973, presented it to The Old Lighthouse Museum in Stonington, Conn. where it is currently on display. Rached died 30 September 1858.

740. ISAAC (SAMUEL, STEPHEN, WILLIAM, CLEMENT, THOMAS), boirn in New Jersey 25 January 1769; son of Samuel, and Anna Tindall; married Rachel Hamel in N.J. She was born in Burlington Co., N.J. in 1776, daughter of John Hamel and Marcy (Mercy) Gibbs.

As a boy, Isaac lived with his family in Windsor Township, Middlesex Co., N.J. Although the John Hamel home plantation was located in Nottingham Township, John and his family also lived in Windsor Township so John must have known John Hamel's daughter, Rachel, when they were growing up. She probably married Isaac soon after the death of her father.

Isaac and his father appear in Fayette Co., Penn. as joint owners of land in North Union Township in 1809. Records of the Great Bethel Baptist Church in Uniontown, Penn. show that Isaac was appointed Deacon 1 May 1812. He had a large plantation on the east side of the road leading to Connellsville from Uniontown, Penn. As described in his will (on file in Uniontown), it was to be divided into four parcels and sold after his death. When that occured, his heirs stated they did not feel that Isaac had provided sufficiently for his widow. But, actually, their main concern appeared to be their disagreement over what they considered the unequal provisions for the heirs. Thus, they signed an agreement which left the part of the property with the "meadow house" for the widow to have for the rest of her life together with any of the moveable property she chose to keep. All of the other assets were to be divided equally among Isaac's sons and daughters, and any sums received during the life of the father were to be accounted for in this final division of the estate.

One reason for the changing of the will was to promote harmony in the family. Later, when Rachel died, it was found that she had left her entire estate to three grandsons, children of her son, Wilson. It would seem that family harmony was not achieved or perhaps it showed her disapproval of the changing of the will of her husband.

Isaac died in Uniontown, Penn. 11 May 1836; Rachel, in 1846.

He accumulated considerable wealth at Lansing, N.Y., but at this point, his generosity was his ruin. Becoming surety for some acquaintances who proved unequal to the task of meeting their obligations, Avery's property was taken in satisfaction. Thus berift of fortune, he went to Ithaca, N.Y. in 1835 at the age of 61; then went west, where capital seemed less essential to success. He located at Huron, Ohio, where he paid $3.00 for a "broken-down" stage horse, and in a wagon that corresponded with the steed, began to keep a meat market. He prospered as a butcher and followed that business until his death which resulted from blood poisoning 13 May 1854. A neighbor had requested that Avery conduct an autopsy of a fine cow that had died on an unknown ailment and in the dissection, he accidently cut his left hand. He gradually lost the power of his hand and survived six or seven years before death ensued. He was a physically powerful man; in politics, a whig. Emma resided in Heron, Toledo and finally, in Clyde until her death 8 December 1874.

WILLIAM, CLEMENT, THOMAS), born in Northfield, Mass. 26 October 1790; son of Clement, and Hepzibah Belding; married Henrietta Fuller 4 September 1819. He resided in Roxbury, Mass. in 1820. Benjamin, or Franklin as his family called him, was a sea captain. He made numerous voyages to the far east and to Europe, often being away from his family for two or three years at a time. Benjamin seemed not to be in love with his trade, however, judging from frequent letters to his brother, Clement S. He wrote on March 10, 1825, that he was suffering from "irritability of temper." On June 16, 1833, he wrote that after 45 days of a tedious passage with 132 immigrants, he considers selling his ship. His oldest son, Benjamin, Jr., at age 13, is living in France. Another son, Edward Goddard, age 9, on September 21, coming, is at boarding school in Brighton, Mass. Benjamin wrote Clement, his brother, that he had sold his ship on August 17, 1833. On May 29, 1834, he wrote the he'd gone back to sea as a mate; still not content, however, continuing to complain of the long voyages as tedious and disagreeable. Benjamin wrote again on June 22, 1838 that he could hardly hold a pen to write . . . his two youngest children, Etta (Henrietta) and Aria (Sarah) had died, one aged 2-$\frac{1}{2}$ years and the other seven months. He was thinking of leaving the sea, possibly going to Missouri. A newspaper clipping found pasted in his sister Sarah's diary reported on Benjamin's death: "July 10, 1839. In Liverpool, England, Capt. Benjamin F. Miner, of ship Bonatum of Boston, 49. He fell into the hold of the ship, fractured his skull, and expired a few hours after."

Clement served in the war of 1812, enlisting in 1813, and was a fife major. He served five years and was discharged from the Light Battalion in 1824. He returned to the Chazy, N.Y. area, purchased some land and built a house. In succeeding years he purchased several lots of land and developed it into a sizable farm where he spent the remainder of his years.

He had a blacksmith shop and a workshop here where he made sashes, blinds and door casings. Following the death of his father, and with two elder brothers at sea during many of those early years, Clement was the one to whom family turned when in need. Franklin (Benjamin F.) will son introduce him to the sea. A short time of this may induce him to think he might be more comfortable on land ..." 1638. ELISHA WAY (ELISHA, ELISHA, CLEMENT, WILLIAM, CLEMENT, THOMAS), born in Lyme, Conn. in 1804; son of Elisha, and Amy Way; married Nancy Latham, daughter of Cyrus Latham of Poquetanock 26 September 1826 and settled there. He died 17 November 1835 while at sea.

After the death of her husband, Nancy married Joseph Perkins. Due to the severity of the Connecticut winters, they moved to Petersburg, Virginia in search of a milder climate. There, the daughter Amie Belzora met and married George Oscar Baker in 1854. These two, together with Nancy and her husband, Joseph, moved further south, settling in Dallas Co., Alabama, some years before the Civil War.

When that war began, their sympathies were with their chosen state, and Joseph Perkins was sent to England by the Confederate Government to buy arms. On the way back, the ship was captured trying to run the blockade and Joseph was held a prisoner of war in Ft. Lafayette, Ellis Island, N.Y. for two years.

As the months seemed unending for his wife, she decided to go to Washington to see President Lincoln to beg for her husband's pardon. It was a desperate journey as she had to pass through the lines of both the Southern and Northern armies. She travelled by train as far as they ran. Then it was "catch as catch can" by wagon, foot, and oxcart but, finally, she reached the Northern lines.

There she was stopped and searched for any incriminating papers. She quickly threw some letters showing her southern sympathy - letters which she had greased with a piece of ham from her lunch - into an open fire. When the guard jumped at her asking her what she was destroying, she midly replied it was her lunch paper. She was allowed to pass and after long last reached Washington.

There she tried in every way she could to see the President. Those were troubled times and he was too occupied with the press of business and the war. She sat in the hall day after day, waiting. There, she saw Lincoln's little son with whom she readily made friends. He came each day to see her. After many weeks had passed and thought her mission would fail, Lincoln's son one day said, "Do you want to see my papa? Come in here," and with that he opened the door and led her into the library where President Lincoln was sitting. "There he is," said the child.

Nancy stepped forward quickly to take advantage of her good fortune and made her plea. Mr. Lincoln looked at her and said, "Two years imprisonment? I think he has been punished enough, don't you?" Then he gave her a pardon for her husband, Joseph Perkins, which she took to New York and presented at the prison and after a long, troubled time, the family was re-united.

Elisha Way Miner was a seafaring man, owner and captain of his own vessel. On his last voyage in 1835, he was stricken with yellow fever and died while two days out of New York. He was buried at sea off Cape Hatteras. Nancy died in Selina, Alabama 28 September 1887 and is buried beside her second husband, Joseph Perkins, who died 28 May 1885.

In 1852, he organized a company of 100 men at St. Joseph, Missouri, crossed the plains to California and spent a year prospecting for gold. He returned east, established a law practice and acted as Justice of the Peace at Adel, Iowa. In 1860, he moved his family to Dakota Territory where he organized and captained a company of 100 men which became Company A, Dakota Cavalry. He campaigned on the nation's last frontier for three years and became known as one of the great Indian fighters of the west. Captain Nelson was mild and gentle in manner of speech and was one of General Sully's most popular officers. At the battle of White Stone Hill, just over the line in North Dakota and at the crucial moment just when victory or defeat hung in the balance, he gave the order to charge by quieting remarking, "boys, I guess you had better charge!" The response was more effective than if he had roared at the top of his voice. Captain Nelson donated the land and helped build the first permanent school building in Dakota Territory. He served four years as registrar of the only land office in the Territory. He was elected to the Territorial Legislature in 1869 and re-elected for each succeeding term until his death in October, 1879. Miner County, South Dakota, was named for him and Ephraim Miner of Yankton, both of whom served in the Territorial Legislature of 1873 when the county was created. Nelson died in 1879.

He wrote many letters during that service to members of his family. One, to a brother, suggesting that if he could find a buyer for his farm and could get $1000. for it, to sell it for him. He said he thought he might like to settle in Virginia. No sale took place, however.

He wrote to his family on 5 October 1864 "... we are having a busy time here. There is a host of sick and wounded Soldiers coming in daily since Grant has commenced his fight. We are filled up, crowded and put beds on the flore and any way to make them comfortable... There is near 6000 here in this hospital (U.S. General Hospital, Hampton, Vir.) so you see we have something to do. But if I have my health is all I ask I want to do all I can for my boys." "I want to know how many sheep I have and if there is anything hurd from my cow. It is quite a los for a poor man of in the army and have his cow stolen or lost. Oh well it is no use to cry for one cow or for spilt milk... well how is the election going with you this fall. I hope Lincoln will get your two votes this fall for he is the man. We like his platform and he will keep the chare if I can help him."

Clement wrote to his brother, Charles, on 23 August 1863, "Charles, if you know when you are well of you wont be in a hury to come here for you are better of whare you are. Charles, it has been so warm here that fish have got sunstroke and com to the top of the water. You had better stay until late in the fall."

Clement sent another letter to Charles from Suffolk, Vir.,

June 1862: "... Charles C_____ has got shot through his foot. His gun was loded and it went off when he was asleep. Had it lying beside him. How it happened is a mistry to all ... Charles, the boys had som sport with a wench last night. They found her with only a coat and a shirt on and she was all mud. Someone had her in the mud so they got her on the rail road and made her pull off her coat and shirt and she was naked. Perhaps there was two hundred looking at her. I did not go to see the dance but I could see them at a distance." He wrote one of his brothers in 1863: "The soldier's Prayer - our father who art in Washington, Abraham Lincoln be thy name. Thy will bo done in the south as it is in the north. Give us this day our daily rations of hard crackers and salt. Forgive us our short-comings as we forgive our comisaries and quarter-masters. For thine is the power over the soldiers for three years as during the war."

Clement wrote from Yorktown, Vir.: "Wilbur Abare came near being shot - happened to have his Bible in his side pocket. The ball went through the Old Testament and stopped at the second chapter of Malachai... spoilt the bible but saved his life..."

In a letter to his parents from Camp Randall, Madison, Wisc., dated 15 February 1863, he wrote: "...I often think of the wishes I used to wish when I was a little boy at home. When I have heard you and Mother and old Jack Willson talking about the war of 1812, I used to wish that the United States would get in a fight so that I could have a chance to participate in it. Little did I think then that I ever should or that the war would be between ourselves. Now I wish not only but I hope and pray that this may shortly close..."

3213. ISAAC (SAMUEL ISAAC, SAMUEL, STEPHEN, WILLIAM, CLEMENT, THOMAS), born in Fayette Co., Pennsylvania 8 April 1830; son of Samuel, and Louisa Keller; married 1st Hannah Nixon 20 December 1855; 2nd Caroline Cropley about 1911. Hannah was born 28 December 1839, daughter of Capt. Isaac Nixon and Sarah. She died in Arcata, Humboldt Co., California. Isaac died 11 December 1916. Both are buried in the Miner Mausoleum, Greenwood Cemetery in Arcata. It was constructed of granite from Isaac's own quarry and under his supervision.

Isaac farmed until of age. Then, strictly on his own, he set out for California and the gold fields by way of New York and the Isthmus of Panama, arriving in San Francisco 4 March 1852. He tried his hand at gold mining in Tuolumne Co. and was "toluably successful." In December 1853, he went to Humboldt Co., locating at Uniontown, later re-named Arcata. During his first six years there, he engaged in packing and trading with the mines and interior towns. He relates that he began with a string of 25 pack mules loaded with potatoes purchased at Uniontown for 4¢ a pound and sold at the mines for an ounce of gold per one hundred weight. An ounce of gold was then worth $17.25, and allowing 200 pounds to the mule, this would make a profit of over $600.

This trade was interrupted by the increasing hostility of the Redwood Creek and Hoopa Indians, which broke out in war in 1862-63.

During his early trading days, Isaac obtained and developed a ranch along Redwood Creek, a stream located between the Klamath and Mad Rivers and on the trail to the mines. The ranch became an important stopping point and supply center on the route. Trouble with the Hoopa Indians in the Redwood Creek area resulted, early in 1863, in the destruction of the house and ranch with all stock and supplies either being taken or destroyed by the Indians.

It was during that period that his brother, Samuel, was killed and scalped by the Indians. Isaac and Samuel were engaged in cutting down a large redwood tree. It was decided that Isaac should go to town to get something and, as soon as he left, Indians who had been waiting in hiding came out and killed Samuel 3 August 1863.

Isaac next located a ranch on the bottom lands about one mile from town. This became a prosperous farm of 140 acres producing wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, apples, plums, cherries, pears, etc.

He first engaged in the redwood lumber business in 1875 in company with H.H. Falk, building the Dolly Varden and Jolly Giant Mills. These were later sold and in 1881 he built the Warren Creek Mill and still later acquired other mills including the Mad River and Glendale Mills. He was highly successful in this business and at one time owned lumber schooners for transporting lumber to the San Francisco Bay area and other points.

One of these schooners delivered the first load of redwood lumber to the Hawaiian Islands. His son, David Keller, was on that journey, over-seeing the delivery. Also, during a brief period in his career, Isaac owned the Mariposa Grove of Sequoias, borrowing nearly $1,000,000 for this purpose in San Francisco and re-selling to an eastern syndicate at a substantial profit. This grove later became a government national forest land.

A very successful and influential man, he chose to invest his capital in his beloved Humboldt County and at one time owned a bank; a theatre (first motion picture); stores; apartments, etc. in Arcata. Just prior to his death, he had started developing a granite deposit near Warren Creek. His heirs later built a railroad into this property and some stone was delivered during the construction of the Humboldt jetty.

3219. WILLIAM HAZLETT (SAMUEL, ISAAC, SAMUEL, STEPHEN, WILLIAM, CLEMENT, THOMAS), born near Uniontown, Fayette Co., Pennsylvania in 1843; son of Samuel, and Louise Keller; married Harriet Eleanor Hedden 7 November 1877 at Arcata, Cal. She was born 22 October 1848, Fayette Co., Penn., daughter of James Hedden and Mary Ann Wood. William died 6 July 1893 at Arcata, Cal.; Harried died 19 March 1926, Oakland, California.

William and his brother grew up helping their father on the farm near Uniontown, Penn., each receiving a portion of the farm's income. At age 21, he enlisted, 24 August 1864 at Uniontown, for a period of one year, in the Penn. Volunteers, 6th Regt., Penn. H. Art'y. His description on the enlistment papers is given as: eyes gray; hair dark; complextion dark; height 5 ft. 6 inches. While he was at work constructing trenches, a large negro man jumped into the trench, landing upon William. This caused a chest injury, and September 29th he was admitted to Mt. Pleasant Hospital, Washington, D.C. Hospital records state, "dysentery and remittent fever--returned to active duty October 27th." The military record has him returned Ft. Ethan Allen, Virginia 3 November 1864. He was mustered out of the army at Ft. Ethan Allen 13 June 1865. His brother, Isaac, was very successful in developing many enterprises at Arcata, California, and it was natural for Isaac to call upon his brothers and other relatives and acquaintances in Fayette Co., Penn., to come to Calif. to help. On 7 August 1872, "W.H. Minor" is listed aboard the west-bound Overland Train as it passed Carlin, Nevada on his way to Arcata, where his brothers Isaac, Samuel and David had preceded him. William was the first teacher of agriculture at the Hoopa Indian Reservation in Humboldt Co., probably between the years 1872 and 1877 (not that full period but sometime between those years). His first child, James Marion, was born at the Isaac Minor Ranch house, so William must have been helping his brother, Isaac, on the ranch at that time. All of the other children were born on a farm that William bought one mile west of Arcata. Here, William raised horses, and did general farming, which included hay, potatoes, poultry, hogs, milk cows, and family vegetables and berry garden and some fruit and walnut trees. He bought enough redwood lumber from Isaac's mill to build a second and much larger farm house with water tower topped by a wind mill.

William was troubled with "chronic bronchitus" ever since his chest injury in the Civil War. 17 July 1891, at age 48, he applied for total disability military pension. His death two years later was attributed to the chest injury. At the time of her husband's death, Harriet was left with a family of young children. James was the oldest at 14 and became the man of the family of young children to help keep the farm going. Harriet did a fine job of bringing up her children by herself to be honest, up-right and to have an attitude of helpfulness toward others.

Mary Jane was born 16 September 1847 in Pittsburgh, Penn., daughter of R. Hunter and Anna Lyle. She died in Atwood, Kansas 22 March 1889. Carrie died in Maple Creek, Sask., Canada in 1912. Lizzie died in Meridian, Miss. Theodore died in Meridian 12 May 1932. It is not known when Theodore left his native Fayette Co. to go to Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, but perhaps it was after his brother, William, was released from the army in 1865. They and their father may have gone together, their sister, Eliza, and her family, having gone to Iowa in 1857, and to the Mt. Pleasant area in 1870. Theodore's first child was born in Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, in 1868 according to his granddaughter Mrs. Dorothy Oddson. It was probably after his father's death (18 December 1878) that Theodore moved his family to western Kansas. They took a train to Kerwin, Kansas, from there went by covered wagon to near Atwood, Kansas.

They lived in a three room house that was dug into the side of a hill. The front was open but the back of the house was into the hill. The living room had hay on the floor with a carpet on top of the hay. There was one bedroom with several feather ticks piled on one bed. These were taken off and spread on the floor for beds at night. The kitchen had a dirt floor that they sprinkled with water every morning then sprinkled with lime. This made it like cement. His daughters Anna and Hannah were married there.

From Kansas, they migrated to Hyannis, Nebraska, where Theodore owned a ranch north of the town. He also had a smaller place about 5 miles southwest of Hyannis. His three youngest children went to school there. Daughter Anna (and her husband) settled near there, later moving to Laramie, Wyoming, where their remaining children still are (1975). Theodore and his son, Theodore, went to Canada in the fall of 1897, his sons John and Harry going there in the spring of 1900. They settled north of Maple Creek, Sask., in the south sandhills. They engaged in raising cattle in the days when the land was "open range." Theodore sold out to Frank Yeast in 1919, and moved into Maple Creek. After two years, he went to Meridian, Mississippi, where he married, had three more children, and where he died, 12 May 1932.

When we left Nauvoo there were fourteen in one wagon... My mother, Tamma Durfee, was determined to come west so she joined Gardiner Snow's company of 50 and with her, William Snow's Company of 100 and Aaron York's company of 10. We planted corn with the oxen enroute. My mother was determined to come to Utah and came with her seven children. We came to Salt Lake City in September 1850. HENRY CLAY (WILLIAM KENDALL, WILLIAM BOTT, BENJAMIN, CLEMENT, BENJAMIN, JOSEPH, THOMAS), born in Jersey Co., Illinois 13 December 1837; son of William Kendall, and Hannah Drury; married 1st Jennett Longwell in Jersey Co., Ill. 10 September 1856. She was born 20 August 1841. She died 19 December 1871 from childbirth and erysipelas of the throat. Henry married 2nd Mrs. Hannah Margaret Neff Sappenfield in Clay Co., Ill. 7 March 1872. She was born in Orange Co., Indiana 11 February 1838. She had two children of her own by her 1st marriage to Alexander Sappenfield, Jr.

who had died 18 August 1866.

Henry's parents had moved from Vermont to Jersey Co., Ill. in 1834. This was pioneer country as the first settlers had arrived in 1816 and 1817. He received his education in the schools of Fidelity, Ill., where he grew up. When the Civil War broke out, he volunteered to serve but was rejected of crippling rheumatism.

In 1863, Henry, his wife and child, Hannah Elizabeth, with six or seven neighbor families, went overland in covered wagons to California. Upon reaching what is now Salt Lake City, Utah, they were stopped by Brigham Young who urged them not to go further because of hostile Indians. Brigham advised and directed emigrant trains in the west.

After six months journeying, they reached their destination which was Marysville, California and lived there on a farm for three years. The climate did not agree with his rheumatic condition so they returned to Illinois. Not wishing to make the dangerous journey overland again, they went by ship past Cape Horn and up to New York Harbor. The trip took six to eight months. From New York, they travelled by rail to Illinois, settling in Clay Co.

In June 1875, Henry and his 2nd wife, Hannah, moved from Clay Co., Ill. to Washington Co., Nebraska, living on a farm twelve miles northeast of Blair. In April 1876, Henry and Hannah's brother, Ben Neff, went out to the Black Hills, South Dakota for the purpose of driving out some cattle in order to provide milk for those manning the mines. Henry drove a wagon with supplies and Ben rode horseback to keep the cattle rounded up.

Henry returned to his farm at Blair in October but Ben remained behind. He kept in touch with his family for a time, then they no longer heard from him. No one ever learned what had become of him.

In 1892, Henry and his family moved to a farm near Hebron, Neb. Later on, they lived in other locations in Neb., Iowa, Washington, and Montana. On 20 December 1914, to celebrate Henry's birthday, some of his children and other relatives gathered at his home in Inman, Neb. He died in Superior, Mont. 13 September 1919 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A.R. Sappenfield. He was buried beside his second wife in Sunnyside, Washington.

After preparations and drilling, the regiment went south through Missouri and into Arkansas, where they participated in the battles of Pea Ridge and Prairie Grove and later crossed the river taking part in the siege and capture of Vicksburg. Later, he was detailed for service on a gunboat as a sharpshooter. During this engagement, he was taken prisoner by the Confederates and sent to Hempstead, Texas, suffering many hard-ships of prison life. He was later paroled and discharged.

In February 1865, with the close of the war, Chancy returned home. He had inherited 80 acres of land which he later sold, purchasing an improved farm of 65 acres at the head of Indian Creek. He further improved his property and married Chloe. Shortly after his marriage, he sold his farm and purchased a tract of 140 acres in Goshen Township. The buildings were dilapidated and the soil poor but he re-built his buildings and fetilized the soil, developing in the process a prosperous farm. Some 20 years later he sold the farm to a daughter and moved to La Fayette about 1844 where he was engaged in the hotel business for 18 years. He retired about 1900. Clapp; married Alice Trainer in Chicago, Illinois 10 January 1895. William's mother died in Juneau on 13 March 1867; his father died in 1873, leaving him an orphan at the age of ten. For six months, William lived with his married sister in Lafayette, Indiana, attending school there. In June, however, he was brought east and taken into the old farmhouse built by his grandfather, Clement Stebbins Miner, and now occupied by his aunt and uncle, Huldah and John Miner, a child-less couple. He remained there until he was 18 years old, attending the one room district school and doing chores on the farm. On the occasion of his 18th birthday, he seriously considered what he was going to do for himself. He thought of perhaps going to Lowell, Massachusetts to work in the mills. On 4 December 1880, his sister and brother-in-law sent him a letter from Lafayette, Ind. He later wrote in pencil on the envelope of this letter, "Letter that started me out in the world from the old farm." The letter is reproduced elsewhere in this book.

"Willie", as he was affectionately known by his family, set out for Lafayette on 27 December 1880. He worked as a machine shop apprentice there, moving on to Minneapolis where he worked as an apprentice and attended night business school and studied engineering at the University of Minnesota. William's career was one of rapid growth and responsibility: Chief draftsman for the Lafayette Car Works, assistant manager and manager; mechanical superintendent of the Hutchins Refrigerator Car Co. where, after studying its problem of draft gear failures, he worked out and patented a solution which would eventually bring him great wealth. On 2 February 1897, he entered the draft gear business on his own with the opening of W.H. Miner, Inc. in Chicago, Illinois. When he died in 1930, William was one of the wealthiest men in the United States.

Uncle John Miner died in 1893 and William and his wife went to Chazy to make their residence on the 144 acre family farm which, by 1930, he had developed into a magnificent estate of 13,000 acres which he named "Heart's Delight." Visitors of great re-nown often went to "Heart's Delight" in their private railroad cars for which William had constructed a private siding. Among those visitors were "Diamond Jim" Brady; Count de Lafayette, grandson of the Marquis; Chauncey Depew, W.K. Vanderbilt, Harvey Firestone, John Burroughs, Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, and Cary Jacobs Bond.

Among his many philanthropic interests were the Gunsaulus Hall for the Arts Institute in Chicago, which he built in 1915 for $50,000.; The Chazy Central School built in 1916 for $2,000,000.; and the 212 room Physicians Hospital built in Plattsburgh, N.Y. in 1916 at a cost of $4,000,000.

A more detailed biographical sketch is to be found elsewhere in this book.

He died, ironically, from the complications of a tonsilectomy in The Physicians Hospital on 3 April 1930. His widow, born in Goderich, Ontario, Canada 23 September 1863, died in Plattsburgh on 29 March 1950. They had one son.

Daughter of Lauren Hotchkiss Roundy and Martha Ann Edmiston, she was born in Springville 12 June 1870.

Abner's (or "Lace" as he was called) father owned a large acreage in the southern part of Springville. Here they built their first log cabin and later the big home. He attended one of the first schools in Springville besides a private school in their home. When he was a young boy, he herded cattle in the canyons and made trips into the canyons for logs and wood. He would tell of his great fright to be in the canyons alone when there were so many Indians about. Eventually, they moved into their own home.

Lace continued to work for his father farming and raising cattle. By the winter of 1897 they had accumulated a sizeable debt and four children. So, early in 1898, they moved to Knightsville, a mining camp. Lace became a foreman at the mines and Mary took in boarders. Later, they purchased more land and moved back to Springville where Lace again took up farming and cattle raising.

In about 1911 or 1912, he again went to work for Jessie Knight in a mine he was opening called the Bonneville Tunnel. The rock in the mine was so sharp and dangerous that all of the men who worked there died within a few years.

Lace was one of the first, dying at the age of 47, leaving eight children ranging from three years old, upwards. It was a sad time for all but though the family was still in debt, life had been full and rich. Mary lived to raise her family and died at the age of 76 in Bakersfield, California, while visiting three of her children. She died 19 February 1946; Lace died in Springville, Utah 22 September 1914.

No town has a more perfect history of the formation of its local government than is here presented. Its form was evidently dictated by experience. The original document, from which the accurate facsimile is taken, is preserved; or rather, only half of the sheet on which it was written. The other half, on which were the names of the eleven persons chosen, is destroyed. On this half, probably, were also the signatures of the remainder of the inhabitants, as there were seventy-two the succeeding January. This curious document is carelessly copied into the first colume of the Records, - speaking but poorly for the general accuracy of the transcriber.

The names of the first board of Selectmen were: Increase Nowell, Esq., Mr. Thomas Beecher, Edward Converse, Ezekiel Richardson, Walter Palmer, Ralph Sprague, William Brackenbury, Thomas Lynde, Mr. Abram Palmer, John Mousal, and Robert Moulton.

THOMAS MINOR
(From Diary of Manasseh Minor, pages 11-19)

Thomas Minor, the father of Manasseh Minor, was born at Chew Magna, Somerset County, England, April 23, 1608. He came to Massachusetts, arriving at Salem and settled at Charlestown, where we find our first record of him in this country in Frothingham's History of Charlestown. In this same book there is a copy in facsimile of an "order" in imitation of the original proceeding on board the Mayflower. It is dated "this 10th of February 1634 (1635)" and of the thirty-three signatures we find that of Thomas Minor. He was made a freeman March 4, 1633-4 and on April 23, 1634, he married Grace, daughter of Walter Palmer of Charlestown.

Wheeler writes in his History of the first Congregational Church. In 1634 the younger John Winthrop formed a company and removed with them to Saybrook (Conn.); with them came our Thomas Minor. In 1643 Winthrop made a move to form a settlement at Nameaug or Pequot (now New London, Conn.) and among his associates was Thomas Minor. In 1645 the settlement of that place was actually commenced, but it is not probable that Mr. Minor moved his family there before 1646. There is probably no more reliable history than that by Miss Frances Manwaring Caulkins of New London, published in 1895, completed by her in 1860.

She makes frequent reference to Thomas Minor in the early years of this struggling community, but does not state from whence he came. We have not found any proof that Thomas Minor was at Saybrook from 1634 to the time he appeared at Pequot or New London in 1645. Wheeler in his History of Stonington gives the birth of several of his children as at Charlestown and at Hingham, Mass., without naming his authority, but it is fair to him to conclude that from the manner in which it is stated he got his facts from town records of the places mentioned, which would not indicate that he lived for any length of time at Saybrook. He may have been there with the men from Massachusetts Bay when Mason led his valorous army of eighty white men from Saybrook and conquered the Pequot Indians at the fort on the west bank of the Mystic River on May 26, 1637, and have returned to Massachusetts. There is no proof of such a condition of facts at hand at this time. Miss Caulkins gives clear statements as to Thomas Minor at New London until he sells his place there October 15, 1652, and then says, "The next year we find him east of the Mystic, where he bought Latham's Neck (see deed dated April 4, 1654) and in December had a town grant "joining his father's land (father-in-law Walter Palmer) at Pockatuck upon the norward side of the path that goes to Mr. Stanton's."

As he gave possession of his New London home in October, 1652, it is fair to assume from the various land transactions that he moved to Stonington that same month and year. His diary as published covers the years from 1653 to 1684, but if any one has seen this remarkable little book, now without covers, and will consider that as it was published over two hundred years after his death, is it not likely that several years earlier writing by his own hand are lost. His statements are very brief, covering a month in a few lines. His first published month, November, 1653, and the next month, December of the same year, indicate clearly his home life in Stonington. In February 1653 (54) he had "9 peeces to hew." In March, 1654, the 7, "I made an end of hewing of timber", and in April, "Monday the 10 I began at the farm at Mistuksuck (Quiambaug). In reading these dates it is well to remember that at that time the year began with March as "The first month."

Here at his own home, in the frame house built by his own labor, with the help of his growing sons, this man lived with his wife until late in 1690 (Oct. 23) he passed on. We are told that his wife died in the same month, but there seems to be no record of the date of her death (She died 31 December 1690). The monument in the Wequetequock burial ground may give proper expression to this one of the four first settlers of the town of Stonington, but the most touching of all in that old consecrated ground is the stone over the grave of Thomas Minor, a piece of broken ledge said to be taken by his own selection from his own farm, of about the length of a man's body, with rudely cut letters, evidently done by one of his sons, with this inscription: "Here lyeth ye body of Lieut. Thomas Minor departed 1690 age 83." Here in this town as one of its founders he labored for the good of his own kin, of his neighbors and the whole community. He helped to organize the first church and served it well. In his diary, p. 207, he writes - This 24 of April 1669 I Thomas Minor am by my own accounts sixty-one years ould. I was by the Towne and this yeare chosen to be a selectman the Townes Treasurer, the Townes Recorder, the brander of horses, by the General Courte Recorded the head officer of the whole Countie, and chossen and sworn Commissioner and one to assist in keeping the Countie Courte.

In 1675 came the greatest Indian uprising of the Colonial period which we will give more in detail later in this book. Although Thomas Minor was in his sixty-eighth year, he joined with all of the able-bodied men of the town and took part in the great swamp fight at Narragansett in R.R. on December 19. Several of his sons, if not all, were there also. In his diary he writes: "From the 8 of december to the 8 of ffebruarie I was Imployed in the Countrie service about the Indian Warr besides 8 days in the sumer hors and man and my white horse Ten days being prest for John Gallup." John Gallup was among the slain in this fight. After it there was terrible suffering because of the cold and the deep snow following the day after the fight as the men were struggling to their homes.

We have no record to show when the second house was built at the Quiambaug homestead, but from entries in Manasseh Minor's diary it was likely in the early years of his occupancy of the farm and a few feet only from the first house. The third house, built in 1830, also very near its predecessor, is now occupied by the owner of the farm, Corneilius Vanderbilt Minor. The farm, originally one mile or more in length on the west side of Quiambaug Cove, has by subdivisions to sons become reduced from several hundred acres to about forty at this time, and for the whole period of two hundred and sixty-one years and over, has without change of family name, been the Miner farm, a record equalled by few homes in New England.

It is not our purpose to exalt either Thomas Minor or his son Manasseh over the other early settlers of Stonington. The four first settlers, William Cheesebrough, Thomas Minor, Thomas Stanton, and Walter Palmer, with George Denison, the greatest Indian fighter after John Mason, John Gallup, and later the Wheelers, Williams, York, Main, Fanning, Hallan, and others, labored for one purpose, to found a town, to have homes for their families, their children and their descendants. They apparently had at times some personal differences, but they were bound by the circumstances of their lives to be united in their aim to establish law and order. The educational advantages were of necessity meagre, and we must acknowledge that they did very well and thoroughly whatever was required in business ways. The interval of two hundred years has made as much advancement in educational conditions as in travel. It was like the latter, gradual improvement, each generation having more than the last one.

THE MINORS PERSONALLY
(Diary of Manasseh Minor, pages 180-185)

In reading of the daily life of these early settlers we have often thought what did they look like? Were they big men physically? There were no photographs at that date. The Daguerreotype process was invented in France in 1839. Prior to that great invention people of large means could engage an artist to paint the family portraits, while the plain farmer would consider it a great thing to have a travelling genius cut the silhouettes of his wife and daughters and frame them, properly labelled, beside their handiwork, the handiwork, the famous samplers. Of these first early settlers of Stonington there is very little to indicate their personal appearance. It has been claimed by the descendants of Walter Palmer that he was nearly seven feet in height. Of William Cheesebrough, we know little in that particular. Nor of Thomas Stanton; all were vigorous men.

Thomas Minor must have been a man of more than the average strength to have endured the hardship of the Indian Wars in 1675 and 1676 when he was sixty-eight years old, and to have continued the farm work mentioned in his diary in his seventy-sixth year. We will take one incident he mentions in his diary - "The 8 of July 1663 Samuel Cheesebrough came to my house and brought an Execution of 2.2s. I denied to deliver him anything or to show him anything and tould him that he should Carrie nothing of Myne out of the house if I could well help it and that I did not owne him to be a Constable to me at this time."

There had been a dispute between the Massachusetts Bay Colony and that of Connecticut as to the dividing line between them, both claiming Southertowne or as it is now Stonington. Thomas Minor evidently sided with the Winthrops of New London in loyalty to Connecticut, while George Denison and some others favored Massachusetts. This execution was quite likely an incident of the dispute. It was dated "This 30th day of June 1663" and signed "By the Court George denison Clerke." It is significant, the difference in time between the 30th of June and the 8th of July. We can imagine on this July day, a big, brawny man, standing in the doorway of his log house with bare head, neck, chest, and arms and a plentiful supply of hair, left arm akimbo with hand on his hip and his right arm raised with hand flat against the doorway, as he looked out with a set jaw at young Cheesebrough and said "he should carrie nothing of myne out of the house if I could well help it", and we can feel pretty confident he could help it and that Cheesebrough knew better than to attempt any force. They were all good friends soon afterward. We commend the wording of this statement in regard to the "execution" as written by Thomas Minor to the able jurists of our day from Stonington and elsewhere and respectfully ask them to prove their better educational advantages and legal ability by taking from it any word, or words, that impair its strength and proper expression, or, if they can, to make its purpose more clear by an additional word.

That his son Manasseh was also a pretty capable person when strength was required we may judge from some entries in his diary where he writes under the dates following:

1700 Apraill 5. I prest men.

1700 Apraill 6. We took seased & caryed to the Gouvnor Thomas Malit & 4 other men.

1701 Febrewary 17. I went to Gordg Denisons for to seas men.

" 19. I seased davis and his men and went with them to New London.

" 21. I came home again.

We can have some confidence that once his hand was on them they were "seased".

On Apraill 22, 1702, he writes "Chois of deputys & Samuel Minor killed six wolves."

This Samuel Minor we think was son of Manasseh's brother Ephraim, born in 1681 and living at Taugwonk, for his mention of "Chois of deputys" would indicate a gathering of the townsmen, where he would likely meet his brother and sons and learn any news of the day. We do not think it was his own son Samuel, who was born Sept. 20, 1675, because it was his habit to write of his own sons giving their Christian names, only, while to others beyond the family he gave full names. 1708 Sept. 28 (he writes) "hunting a bare & I sewed wheat." He does not say who hunted the bear and we can see the calmness of mind of an industrious man who could "sewed wheat" while his sons and neighbors were gunning for a bear in the swamp or over the hill to the northwest of his wheat field, but that night after the chores were over and all seated around the log fire the father's hunting blood was roused and next day he too joined the hunt. Sept. 29, "We kild a bare a buk & a racoon & Cap. Avery Cam hear." This was some day's sport and taken with the killing of six wolves by young Samuel Minor would have "delighted" our greatest hunter of today, only he would have taken much more space in telling of it.

He mentions his "long gun", as evidently he had several, and though there is much in the diaries of these men, father and son, to indicate that they were not by nature quarrelsome, we can feel assured that when roused as they were in the Indian wars of 1675 and 1676 they would use those long guns to every possible advantage in the defense of their homes and put lead in any Indian who showed fight with the same determination as shown by young Samuel Minor when he killed six wolves in one day.

We should make some mention of the brothers of Manasseh Minor. Clement, living in New London, whom he very likely saw frequently, and who for that reason is not often mentioned, served in the Narragansett Indian wars from New London; Ephraim, living at Taugwonk, served in the Indian wars and led his company in 1704, May 25. "Ephraim went away with his men." He does not say when they returned, but in August, "Ephraim went with the new suply of soldiers to dearfield", and Sept. 1, "Ephraim came home."

Colonial history describes the Deerfield massacre as the most horrible of all that occurred. John Minor, the oldest brother, when quite young was chosen with the son of Thomas Stanton to be educated at the Colony's expense to be able to preach to the Indians. Neither of these young men followed that calling long. John Minor first settled in Stratford, then moved to Woodbury, and in both places he was visited by his father and brothers from Stonington. Cothern's history of Woodbury, Volume I, page 58, states:

"First among the settlers, men of note in Woodbury, and foremost in all difficult undertakings, was John Minor, an interpreter to the Indians, a justice of the quorum among the magistrates, a captain in the militia and a deacon in the church. He was also surveyor. All of the Indian deeds in the region were executed before him from his being able to act as interpreter. He was town clerk of Stratford for ten years from 1666, with the exception of one year, and held the same office in Woodbury for thirty years from its beginning. He was also for twenty years almost always a member of the General Court, held an influential position there and was frequently appointed on committees. He died Sept. 17, 1719, age 85, and was buried in the southwest part of the ancient burial ground, but no stone remains to mark the spot." His daughter, Grace Minor, married Samuel Grant and from this marriage Judge Wheeler in his "Stonington", traces the line to General U.S. Grant.

Samuel, Manasseh's youngest brother, who was born in 1652, died in 1682. It would appear from the entries in his father's diary that (1682 June), Thursday 22, Samuel went to Hartford with the Canoow and thursday the 29 Samuel came whome ffrom Coneitcut it was verie wet." Later he writes in reference to Samuel in July Saterday the 22, "I came ffrom Mr. Withrels the 14 day of Same sickness" - evidently it was fever or pneumonia; the date of his death is not written by his father. His brothers Clement and Manasseh from New London are mentioned in reference to farm work and on August 9 "Clement & Manasseh went whome. I was at mill Manaseth had Sams hat." It must have been a sorrowful household, the bride of the previous December left a widow and the hope of the father's and mother's old age taken from them. Samuel Minor served in the swamp fight of Dec. 19, 1675, and during the various forays of the next year he was an active participant as his father writes at various times.

"1676 June Thursday the 15 we were to meet all the souldiers at Steveen Richardsons house. Sabath the 18 the Souldiers came whome from the Armie. Tusday 27 Samuel went for Interpreter to the Arme the second time. July Wensday the 5 Samuell came whom from the Armie sick. The 8 day was saterday, Capt. Denison was heare. The 22 saterday I ffetched whome the prisnors from the Queenstowne. Our son John was heare the 23 day; the Armie marched of from Machantucksetⁿ."

They were all men of force and decision and we think the expression used in reference to John, the oldest son, "foremost in all difficult undertakings", one of the greatest compliments that can be paid any man or to men of any family. The men who can follow a leader are legion, but those who are willing and have the capacity and the courage to lead are few and rare indeed.

THE INDIAN WARS
(Diary of Manasseh Minor, pages 172-179)

The year 1675 brought with it the gloom and terror of an Indian war, the greatest Indian uprising of the Colonial period. After nearly forty years of quiet following the vindictive struggles with the Pequots, the whole country was terror struck with the news that a widespread combination of Wampanoags, Narragansetts, and other tribes had been formed with the design and desperate hope of exterminating the white race from the land. Suddenly, before any effectual measures of defense had been concerted, Phillip, with his fierce hoarde of warriors, burst out of the dark cloud like a thunderbolt.

Connecticut, as well as the neighboring colonies, lay exposed to an immediate assult. Her eastern frontier was open to the Narragansetts; Norwich and Stonington were particularly in danger. Within her limits were bands of Indians, who might perhaps be induced to join the enemy, and one of the bands, the Mohegans, was at no time more powerful than at this juncture. Patronized by the Masons, and having his frontier protected by Norwich, Uncas had been for fifteen years increasing in numbers and strength. This wary Sachem kept his neighbors for some time in doubt which party he would join in the contest. Messrs. Wetherell and Avery made him a visit on the 28th of June, to ascertain, if possible, how he stood affected to Phillip's designs and returned apprehensive that he was leagued with the enemy. In Mr. Wetherell's letter to the Governor he says, "We have reason to believe that most of his men are gone that way, for he hath very few men at home. 'Tis certain he hath lately had a great correspondence with Phillip, and many presents have passed."

On Sunday, June 24th, the first overt act of hostility was committed by Phillip. Several houses were burned and men were slaughtered at Swansey. It does not appear that the news reached New London till June 29th, when it was brought by a messenger on his way to Hartford, dispatched by Mr. Stanton to carry the fearful tidings to the governor. Mr. Wetherell wrote urgently to Governor Winthrop, June 29th and 30th, for assistance. "It is reported Philip is very near us and expects further assistance from Uncas. We have great reason to believe there is an universal combination of the Indians, and fear you cannot aid us timely. We are calling in all our outlivers, and shall by God's assistance, do our best for our defense, but hope that your Honor, with the rest of the honorable Council, will despatch present supplies for our aid."

Major John Winthrop, the highest military commander in the county, was then dangerously ill, and this was calculated to increase the panic of the three eastern towns. The council of war immediately despatched forty men to their aid, and Captain Wait Winthrop, being authorized to act, both as a military commander and a commissioner, raised a considerable force, and marched directly into the Indian territory. Here he met troops and commissioners sent from Massachusetts, and assisted in concluding a treaty with the Narragansetts, which quieted for a time the alarm of the eastern towns. The Mohegans, after some little hesitation, and the Pequots and Nahantics, with acceptable readiness, joined the English; and both eventually performed essential service. During the summer the principal seat of the war was in the interior of Massachusetts, and the towns on the Connecticut River were the sufferers. But as winter approached, the hostile Indians concentrated their forces in the Narragansett territory, in dangerous proximity to the Connecticut frontier.

The military regulations enforced by the General Court in October were of a stern and vigorous cast, and embodied in terms of anxious solemnity. They were in fact equivalent to putting the whole Colony under the ban of martial law. The most important enactments were these: Sixty soldiers to be raised in every county; the Pequots to be assigned to the charge of Captain Avery, and the Mohegans to Captain Mason; places of defense and refuge to be immediately fortified in every plantation; neglect of orders in time of assault to be punished by death; no provisions allowed to be carried out of the colony without special license, and no male between fourteen and seventy suffered to leave the colony without special permission from the Council or from four assistants, under penalty of 100 pounds.

New London, Norwich and Stonington were all partially fortified and a constant guard was maintained. In the belfries on the meeting houses, and on the high hills, watchmen were kept on the lookout, with sentry boxes erected for their accommodations. An army was raised of one thousand men. The proporation of Connecticut was three hundred and fifteen, who were placed under the command of Major Robert Treat, of Milford, and ordered to rendezvous at New London.

The troops began to collect the latter part of November. New London County raised seventy men under Captain John Mason, of Norwich, beside Pequots and Mohegans under Captain Gallop. Of the seventy men, Norwich contributed eighteen; New London, Stonington and Lyme forty; Saybrook, eight; Killingworth, four. The whole force was to be at New London December 10th. Great exertions were made to obtain the requisite quantity of provisions and all of the apparatus of war. Indians were to be fitted with caps and stockings. At length there was an impressment of beef, pork, corn and rum, horses and carts, and the army marched. These troops, forming a junction with those of the other colonies, were engaged in the fearful swamp fight at Narragansett, December 19, 1675. A complete victory was here obtained over the savage foe, but at great expense of life on both sides. The number of Indians killed on the side of the enemy was estimated at nearly a thousand. Of the English army, two hundred were killed and wounded, of whom eighty were of the Connecticut line - a large proportion out of three hundred and fifteen. The loss sustained by the friendly Indians (if any) is not included in this number.

The Mohegans in this fight were under the command of Captain John Gallop, of Stonington, who was among the slain. Captain Avery had charge of the Pequots.

Captain John Mason, of Norwich, received a wound with which he languished till the next September, and then died. In January, 1675-6, another army of one thousand men was raised. The Connecticut quota was again three hundred and fifteen; their leader Major Treat, and their rendezvous New London. They began their march on the 26th, passed through Stonington into the Narragansett country, and from thence northwesterly into the Nipmuch region, clearing away the Indians in their course, but meeting with no opportunity to strike a heavy blow. Uncas himself accompanied this expedition. In May the General Court authorized the enlistment of three hundred and fifty men, as a standing army, to be in readiness for service. This force, under the command of Major John Talcott, was almost immediately ordered into the field. Norwich at this time being designated as the gathering place. The number of Indian auxiliaries engaged at this time was unusually large.

Major Talcott left Norwich June 2d, and entering the wilderness, marched directly toward the upper towns on Connecticut River, where the opportune arrival of so large a force is supposed to have saved Hadley from Indian devastation. Captain George Denison had charge of the company raised in New London County. This army returned to Connecticut about June 10th, having scoured the country as far up the river, but met with very few of the enemy.

The Council of War ordered a coat to be given to every Indian out on this long march "in regard (they observe) the service was tedious and little or no plunder gained." After a few days refreshment, this spirited army again entered the hostile districts, and, marching first to the northwest of Providence, then turning to the southeast, explored the necks and forests down to Point Judith. From thence they returned through the Narragansetts, Magnus, the old queen or sunk squaw, was slain, and in two engagements, two hundred and thirty-eight Indians were slain or captured.

Major Talcott's little army, after a short dispersion and rest, was ordered to reassemble at New London on the 18th of July. they marched again, about the 20th, and made their way this time into the very heart of Plymouth Colony. July 31 they were at Taunton. From thence they returned homeward, but hearing that a large party of Indians, who were taking their flight westward into the wilderness, had committed some depredations on cattle and corn near Westfield, they immediately took the route thither, and pursuing the trail of the now forlorn and famished savages, they had a sharp and final struggle with them, beyond the Housantonick, on the route to Albany. The troops then returned to Connecticut and on the 18th of August were ordered by the Council to repair to their respective counties and disband their men. Phillip had been hunted down and slain (August 12th) by the Plymouth men and the war was at an end.

Returning to an early period of the contest, we find that in February 1675-6, commenced that series of forays into the Indian territory which issuing at short intervals from New London County, and led by those noted Indian fighters, Denison and Avery, contributed in no small degree to the favorable result. These soldiers, Pequots, Mohegans and Nahanticks - disorderly among themselves, but condensed against the foe, the Indians usually double the number of the whites and more useful as scouts and plunderers than in direct attack.

It was in the third of these roving excursions, begun March 28t and ended April 10th, 1676, that the brave Narragansett chieftain, Canonchet, was taken prisoner. This was one of the great exploits of the war. The unfortunate captive was brought to Stonington, and there put to death, after the Indian mode of execution, being shot by Owaneco and two Pequot Sachems, the nearest to his own rank among his conquerors. This was done by the captors, without any waiting for advice, or reference to superior authority. The Indians taken in arms during this war were generally executed. As far as these warriors were concerned, it was a war of extermination. Quarter was seldom conceded, and death followed close upon capture and submission. This was the customary and legalized mode of proceeding in war with savages, and regarded as the only safe course, the dictate of stern necessity. The women and children were saved, and either amalgamated with the Mohegans or distributed among the English for servants. The signal service performed by these partisan bands is thus acknowledged by Hubbard, the early historian of the Indian wars:

"The inhabitants of New London, Norwich and Stonington, apprehensive of their danger, by reason of their near bordering of the enemy, and upon other prudent considerations, voluntarily listed themselves under some able gentlemen and resolute soldiers among themselves, Major Palmes, Captain George Denison, Captain Avery, with whom, or under whom, within the compass of 1676, they made ten or more several expeditions, in all of which, at those several times, they killed and took two hundred and thirty-nine of the enemy, by the help and assistance of the Pequots, Mohegans, and a few friendly Narragansetts; besides thirty taken in their long march homeward; after the fort fight, December 19, 1675; and besides sixteen captivated in the second expedition not reckoned in the compass of the said number; together with fifty guns and spoiling the enemy of an hundred bushels of corn."

In most instances, the soldiers retained the booty and the captives that they brought home. Captain Denison was the most conspicuous soldier of New London County. Captains Avery and Minor were also prominent in these excursions. Major Palmes, though active in the forwarding department, took the field but once, and that was in one of the flitting inroads into the Narragansett territory.

From Miss Caulkin's N.L., p. 181 to 188.

No list or roll of the Stonington men who participated in the early Indian wars has been preserved. The nearest approach to which may be found in "list of the English volunteers in the Narragansett War" as prepared by a committee for that purpose in order to secure a grant of land for their services, as follows: Capt. George Denison, Sergt. John Frink, Capt. John Stanton, Capt. Samuel Mason, Rev. James Noyes, Lieut. Thomas Minor, Samuel Youmans, John Fish, George Denison, Jr., William Denison, Nathaniel Beebe, Henry Stevens, Edmund Fanning, Thomas Fanning, John Bennett, William Bennett, Ezekiel Main, William Wheeler, Gersham Palmer, Samuel Stanton, Deniel Stanton, Manasseh Minor, Joseph Stanton, James York, Henry Bennett, Capt. James Pendleton, Robert Holmes, Thomas Bell, Henry Elliott, Isaac Wheeler, John Gallup, Nathaniel Chesebrough, Ephraim Minor, Joseph Minor, Samuel Minor, John Ashcroft, Edmund Fanning, Jr., John Denison, William Billings, and Samuel Fish.

WILLIAM HENRY MINER

William Henry Miner, manufacturer, was born in Juneau, Wis., Oct. 22, 1862, son of William Henry and Martha (Clapp) Miner and grandson of Clement S. Miner and Lydia (Dominy) Miner. His father was a carpenter. Left an orphan at an early age, William H. Miner was taken to Chazy, N.Y., in 1871 to live with his uncle, John Miner, and there he attended the one-room district school and worked on the farm. In 1880, at the age of eighteen, he went to Lafayette, Ind., and secured employment with the Wabash Railway Co. as a machine shop apprentice. Two years later he went to Minneapolis, Minn., where he served as an apprentice with the Prey Manufacturing Co. During this time he attended a business college at night and later studied engineering at the University of Minnesota. He returned to the Wabash Railway at Lafayette in 1886 as chief draftsman in the bridge and building department, and was then successively at the Lafayette Car Works as chief draftsman, and the Lima (Ohio) Car Works in charge of estimating and mechanical details and later as manager. In 1888 he went to the Michigan Peninsular Car Works of Detroit in charge of its finishing department. In 1890 he accepted an opening at the Michigan Car Works Detroit, as assistant to the general manager, continuing in that position until 1891. In Detroit he had become acquainted with officials of the Hutchins Refrigerator Car Co. which was pioneering in the use of the refrigerator cars owned by the California Fruit Transportation co. for transporting fruit from California to New York and the East. Miner was offered the position of mechanical superintendent of the latter company in charge of the operation and maintenance of its equipment. The Company also worked up a large business shipping fruit to Europe in refrigerator rooms in White Star Line steamships, and in 1892 he made a trip to England to inspect the condition of the fruit on unloading. Meanwhile, the California Fruit Transportation Co. was having draft gear failures on its cars, which resulted in heavy damage claims for fruit spoilage en route. Miner spent much time working on a device to overcome the difficulties and in 1891 was granted a patent on a spring draft rigging (U.S. Pat. No. 461,443). With the success of the device, he established his own company in 1897 as W.H. Miner, Inc., in 1923 and he served as its president until the close of his life. By 1898 the Miner tandem draft rigging was in use on 15,000 cars owned by sixteen railroads and private car lines. The business increased and, as heavier railway service developed, he turned to designing a friction draft gear (U.S. Pat. No. 754,670) in 1904, to meet the requirements of more modern freight cars and locomotives. The company also furnished power hand brakes, roller side bearings, safety locking pins, and door fasteners for refrigerator cars and for truck and trailer bodies. Other than his own business Miner was a director of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Western Electric Co., Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, and the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. He was also chairman of the board of Pratt & Letchworth Co., Buffalo, N.Y. Philanthropically active, Miner in 1915 gave his first public gift, $50,000 for the erection of an addition to the Art Institute of Chicago, and the building was named Gunsaulus Hall. In 1916 he built the Chazy (N.Y.) Central Rural School at a cost of $2,000,000. Through its erection the consolidation of eleven one-room rural schools was effected and afforded to the children of the community all the educational advantages of the best city school system. It consisted of forty-four rooms for grade and high school, an auditorium, library, two gymnasiums, two swimming pools, and rooms for special courses in household arts, and other studies. He also built a residence for the teachers, modern in all details, and arranged for a fleet of nine buses for the transportation of children living at a distance. The Physicians Hospital, Plattsburgh, N.Y., erected by Miner and his wife at a cost of $4,000,000 was completed and opened Jan. 1, 1926. The building, in the shape of a Greek cross, had four wings, 212 rooms, and a capacity for sixty-eight additional beds. Of Georgian style architecture, it had seven stories in each wing and ten stories in the center tower, and contained two operating rooms with observation amphitheaters and every facility known to the field of medicine. Miner belonged to the American Biscon Society, National Association of Audubon Societies, New England Historic genealogical Society, Wisconsin Society of Chicago, Art Institute of Chicago, Field Museum of Natural History, American Museum of Natural History, Missouri Athletic Club, National Arts Club, Bankers Club of America, The Attic, Mid-Day, South Shore Country Club of Washington, D.C., the Railroad, Jonathan Metropolitan, and St. James Clubs of New York City, and the Mason order (Knight Templar, Shriner). His religious affiliation was with the Central Church, Chicago. Politically he was a Republican. His special interest was Heart's Delight Farm, Chazy, which was the original homestead of his paternal grandfather who settled there in 1820. In 1903 Miner began developing the original 150 acres and at his death he had enlarged it to include 13,000 acres of model farm. Other than the breeding of pure-bred stock, the farm maintained a trout hatchery and a wild animal preserve on which were kept deer and bison and other North American wildlife. He was married in Chicago, Jan. 10, 1895 to Alice Trainer and had a son William Henry (died in infancy). His death occurred in Plattsburgh, N.Y. April 3, 1930.

LIFE SKETCH OF ALBERT MINER AND TAMMA DURFEE MINER FATHER AND MOTHER OF MORONI MINER AND MORMON MINER

Written by Tamma Durfee Miner when she was 67 years old, and filed in the Relief Society Jubilee Box of Utah Stake Relief Society. Opened in 1930 and given to her grand daughter Francis Carter (Clark) Knight.

A MEMORIAL WRITTEN BY TAMMA MINER MARCH 13, 1881 IN SPRINGVILLE, UTAH.

My father's name was Edmond Durfee; he was born in Rhode Island Oct. 3, 1788 of Dutch decent. Her name was Lanna Pickle-her father and mother were from Holland. (I think high Dutch.)

I was born in the state of New York, Madison County, Town of Lenox, March 6, 1813, and lived there until I was about 9 years old. We then moved to Oswego County-Town of Amboy-a new county. Father bought some land, built him a house, made a small farm, worked at his trade mostly, as carpenter and mill-right. We lived there till the first of June 1830 and bought more land. There were lots of maple trees on it and lots of maple sugar. Then father wanted to go west, so he sold his sugar bush and farm and everything and started for the south of Ohio. We went through Camden Village to the canal, went on the canal to Buffalo, went of Briggles; father bought some land and went to work to make a home and the next winter in 1831 we heard about the Mormons and the "Gold Bible". The next spring Soloman Hancock came preaching about Joseph Smith, said that the Lord and the Angel Moroni had revealed them to him. Soloman joined in with us the Methodist and the campbellites, and he would preach in our meeting house, and we would go to hear him and they were all astonished for it was so much different from what it had been reported.

This was sometime in April 1831 and my father Edmond Durfee was baptized about the middle of May and my mother, sister Martha and brother Edmond were baptised about the first of June by Solomon Hancock and I believed it the first time I heard him preach it and told us the Book of Mormon was true.

I was a Mormon in belief but not baptized till Dec. 1831 and I will tell you the reason why I was not baptized. I was keeping company with a good young man as I thought, and I was told he said he would not have a Mormon for a wife; so I waited until after I was married.

I went to Mormon meetings and sometimes to the Methodist till the 9th of August 1831 when I was married to Albert Miner. (He was born in the state of New York-March 31, 1809, Jefferson County. His fathers name was Azel Miner, his mother was Sylvia Monson.) We got along first rate and we went to meeting sometimes to one place and sometimes to the Mormons till Dec. 1831 when my father was going on a mission to the state of New York, and he baptized me before going on his mission.

Albert Miner's mother and brother and sisters had a great deal to say about the Mormons as they did not believe in the Book of Mormon, but he told them that the more they had to say the sooner he would be baptized. He waited till the first of February 1832 when they cut a hole in the ice and baptized him.

My oldest daughter Polly was born on the 1st of May 1832. My father gathered some of his carpenter tools and seed grain and farming tools and in company with others, he started for Jackson Co., Missouri on the first of Feb. 1832, to build a place for all his family to go to and he came home in the fall of 1832, sold his farm and all our possessions and started for Kirtland, Ohio on the first of May 1833.

The Lord said "he would keep a strong hold" for five years in Kirtland, we bought us a farm, built us some houses and prepared to live.

I was there on the fourth of July when they wanted 24 Elders to lay the corner stones to the Temple in Kirtland and they ordained George A. Smith and Don Smith to make up the number 24. Six to each corner. Albert Miner, my husband, helped to haul stone every Saturday for a long time to build the Temple.

My oldest boy was born Oct. 22, 1833. Called his name Orson. They next spring the most of the Elders were called to volenteer to go and redeem Jackson County. Albert Miner told Mr. Dennis Lake he would draw cuts, to see which would take care of both families and it fell to Albert Miner to take care of the families. Dennis Lake went with the company to redeem Jackson County and when he got back he apostatized and sued Joseph Smith for three months work, $60.00.

On the 4th of July 1835, I had a son born. Called his name Moroni and Joseph Smith blessed him and said "he should be as great as Moroni of old, and the people would flee unto him and call him blessed."

They were still building the Temple. There were some of the brethern that came from a distance and stayed with us until the next spring and received their endowments and was there to the dedication of the Temple in 1836. After that a good many began to apostatize and broke up the Kirtland bank. I had a girl born June 18, 1836-called her name Silva. A great many things transpired-I haven't time to write and so long ago can't place them. Land came up and sold for a large sum of money and they had a great speculation and a great many left the church of the Latter Day Saints.

I had a boy born Sept. 26, 1837-called his name Mormon. In the spring of 1837 my father sold his farm and all his possessions and started for Caldwell Co. Mo. and we stayed there that summer and fall.

Those that left the Mormons grew worse till Joseph and Sidney Ridgon and Father Smith had to leave in January in the middle of the winter. That fall Albert Miner had a very sick spell. The last of January he got some better so he could ride in a sleigh on a bed and I held a unbrella over him and with 2 children on my lap we went 80 miles from Kirtland to Hurron Co. New London, where A. Miner's folks lived. Four days on the road; it had been pleasant and warm but it turned fearful cold winter weather. A. Miner got better and we stayed there till May.

Sent back to Kirtland and sold his farm, put some of his means in to the Kirtland camp and took the balance and A. Miner his wife and children started for Far West Missouri. About the middle June 1838-bidding his mother, sisters and brothers all farewell for the Gospel sake. His father died in 1829. We traveled till we got short of means and then we stopped and worked till we got more and then went back to the camp meeting to pay them a visit and then we went on to Missouri and got to Dewitt the last of August. The children were all sick and I had been so sick that I could not walk, and A. Miner had been so ill he could not harness his team or take care of them. We soon got better, we stayede one week at Dewitt and then we started for Farwest all alone, got to fathers about the first of Sept. The children were all sick, father said they would get better and they did, so in a few days Silva got worse and died about the first of oct. 1838.

The mob gathered and killed and drove all the Mormons from Adam Diamon to Farwest. Not being satisfied the whole state with the Governor at their head, gathered by the thousands to drive them from Farwest. They wanted Joseph Smith & Sidney Rigdon, our leaders and the Twelve, and all they could get and put in prison and they got so mad; some were bailed out and others had to stay and take up with such a fare as they could get and be fed on human flesh, but Joseph told them "not to eat it" for the spirit of the Lord told him it was human flesh. Thus we were plundered, smitten and drive, and our lives were threatened and were ill treated on every side by our enemies. Enemies to the truths of Heaven came along, one to five hundred right to our houses, and nobody but women and little children around-take our men prisoners with out any cause, only because they were Mormons, and believed in the truths of the Gospel. They wanted to know if we had any guns, pistols or ammunition or butcher knives or such things. No one can tell only those that passed through it and was an eye witness to it can describe the feeling of the Saints and what they passed through.

Those men that were at liberty and had teams to help others to the Mississippi river then back after their own families.

Father's folks had lived there one year. His name was Edmond Durfee. He went in 1837 and A. Miner, T. Miner and 5 children got to the Missouri the first of Sept. 1838. We lived on what they called "Log Creek", six miles from Farwest. I was there when they killed David Patten, when they took lots of prisoners and the saints had to lay down their lives for their enemies. Mr. A. Miner was one that had to take a load to the Mississippi River, so we did not get away until the first of April 1839. We had wittnessed a good leaving in the cold and dreary winter. We crossed over to Quincy, went up the river to the place called Lima, Hancock Co., Ill. We there built us a house, bought a small place and fixed to live a short time. But the devil wasn't dead yet. In a short time there was some that would go to Lima and get drunk and come back swearing and tearing enough to frighten men let alone women and children. I told Mr. Miner I did not like to live there and hear them swear.

While at Lima I had a girl born Jan. 13th 1840 and we called her Matilda. We stayed there till the year from the next Sept. Got along the best we could. Every fall and spring we went 30 miles to conference and join the fourth of July to training. I had a boy born Sept. 7, 1841-called him Alma L. In the spring my husband bought a place four miles east of the Temple in Nauvoo and we lived there where we could get to meeting and back home at night. I had a boy born June 18, 1843 and called him Don Carlos.

Was there in 1844 when Joseph and Hyrum were martyred. I went in and saw them after they were taken to their homes.

I had been acquainted with them for 12 years. In May I heard them both preach and talk to the saints a good many times. I heard Joseph once talk and preach five hours to a congregation, no one was tired. (This was in Kirtland before they built the first Temple.) A great many incidents I have passed through but have not time to name them. We still lived in Nauvoo.

After they got the Nauvoo Temple done they saw they could get their washing and annointings, that wanted it done, in January, February and March.

The gentiles and the mabecrates threatened and told around how they would kill and drive them, (the Mormons) did kill and drive them from Lima, and shot my father Edmond Durfee and killed him instantly on Nov. 19, 1845. He who never done them any harm in his life, but on the contrary, he always taught them good principles of truth and uprightness and greatness and moratily and industeries all the days of his life. But before this, they drove them all out of Father Morleys settlement, turned their sick ones out, drove them all out to live or die; rolled my bother Nephi up in a bed and threw it out doors, when he was sick. Went to the oat stack, got two bundles of oats, and put a brand of fire in them, threw them on top of the house and said they would be back next morning. Father was trying to move someplace and they came back and shot all their guns and run them all off and plundered and made a fire, burned houses, furniture, clothing, yarn looms, cloth and carpenter tools. The iron from the tools they picked and filled a barrell; everything all around burned to ashes and the mob went from house to house driving them out sick or well, it made no difference, till they burned every house in the town that was Mormons.

The men from Nauvoo got their teams and started for Lima and traveled all night and day to get the families that had been burned out doors. My husband was one that traveled all night and got cold, took a chill and was ill for a long time. The mob said that they could come back and gather their crops; they were nearly done so decided to stay over Sunday. When it got dark the mob came back and built a fire near the barns. The Mormons thot they meant to burn their horses and rushed out, the mob stood back in the timber and as the men got between them, they shot all about a dozen guns, but my father was the only one killed. They built a fire in different places; one in the corn crib and the shucks was on and dry rail and dry shucks and it burned a little and went out, so you see they couldn't go any farther than the Lord let them. This was in the fall of 1835. They still kept gathering all the fall and winter. The saints worked hard all winter giving endowment and sealing others. Worked at repairing and building wagons ready to leave, some of them before the ice broke up in the river and the rest soon after.

Little over one year before my husband had his farm bought from under him by a man by the name Ephraim S. Green, with all he had worked and done and paid on it. We were turned out doors with a family of little children. So he rented one year and turned out one span of horses and bought a piece of land in order to make another home.

On March 5, 1846 I had a girl born-called her name Melissa. We remained there for a time. The mob gathering every little while threatening all the time how they would drive the Mormons. At last a great many left not knowing where they were going to hunt a place in the wilderness among the savages and wild beasts over the desert beyond the Rocky Mountains where white men had never lived. In the spring the mob began to get together once a week and threatened to drive what was left. The first of May we moved to town, sold our place for a yoke of cattle and wagon thinking to start on it two or three weeks, but the mob gathered every week right in the public square close by the house. The Mormons told them they would go as fast as they could get ready and teams to go with; mostly women and children were left and they did not want anymore of the men to leave for fear of what might happen so we stayed and lodest brother and his family were with us.

Mr. A. Miner was born in the state of New York March 31, 1809 Jefferson County. His fathers name was Azel Miner, his mother was Sylvia Monson.

--Till at last new citizens and apostates to carry the day they used to carry the letters in their boots and get all the news.--

Till at last they said there were about 2,000 of them camped one mile from a town in a field. In the afternoon here they came across lots to get in town. There were only 50 men to go out and meet them. They drove them back that night. In the morning at 2:00 it was moon light and the Mormons went and fired right in their camp and they fired guns and cannons on both sides till 2:00 in the afternoon. They killed three Mormon men, (one man was named Anderson and his son both killed by one cannon ball, they said they did not obey counsel). One man was killed by a cannon ball in a blacksmith shop, 3 men were slightly wounded, my brother was wounded by a gun, between the cords of his heel.

There were only 50 of the Mormon's against 2,000 of the mob, ten of them had to be on guard two on the top of the temple with spy glasses they went into Laws corn field and there they had their battle, they were seen to fill 2 wagons with wounded and killed. The next morning a woman stood in a second story house and saw the mob put 76 bodies in Calico slips with a draw string around the top before they left home.

The Mormon women rolled the cannon balls up the their aprons, took them to our boys and they put them in the cannon and would shoot them back again when they were hot, but there were a great many more missing, it was a fearful time. I could have crossed the river but I would not leave my husband. In about 2 days they had to surrender, lay down their arms. I saw the mob all dressed in black ride two by two on horseback. It looked frightful, they said there were 2,000 of them rode around the Temple in Nauvoo.

The men had to ferry the boat over five times for each family. My husband had to ferry it over five times for my brother that got wounded and five times for us. We got over, stayed there two weeks slept on the ground waiting for help, there were fourteen of us to one wagon.

My baby got sick but we stayed and in three days my baby died on the first of Oct. 1846. We traveled on one day and the next morning we burried her, she was seven months old, her name was Melissa Miner. We went one day where we were acquainted went on three days came to Iowaville. We stayed there through the winter and there my husband worked at hauling and running a ferry boat.

When my baby died I took sick and never sit up only to have my bed made for nine months. My husband thought of moving to the Bluffs but a good many came back to get work so he cut and put up hay for his stock and then said he would go back to Ohio to see all his folks, so he started a foot to the Mississippi River all alone. Short of means he went on two or three miles and right before him was $5.00 in silver on the ground. He went on and found his folks all well but no one believed in the gospel. All opposed him. He was gone ten weeks, came home very unwell and being gone so long he was homesick and tired and had walked in the rain all day.

Polly my oldest daughter who was fourteen years old, took care of the family of nine and waited on me while I was sick and while her father was gone. Not feeling very well when he came he thought he would feel better after he got rested, but he grew worse. He tried to work for half a day and go to bed the other half. He came home about May 17, 1847. He kept that was, first better then worse till at last he dropped off very sudden.

What a hard blow, as we thot he was getting better I and the children thought a better man never lived. A kind good natured disposition, industrious. He was a genius, could do anything he saw anyone else do.

Alma and the little boys said "Which way shall we go? We will not know the way." They thot their father so perfect that he could do nothing wrong and that he knew everything.

Polly and Orson were the oldest. They had to take the lead and go ahead and plan. His folks had offered him everything if he would stay with them and not go with the Mormons but the Gospel, the truths of the Book of Mormon and the Holy Priesthood were all he wanted.

Polly was a true and faithful daughter to her mother, and Orson was a true and faithful son.

Albert Miner died Jan. 3, 1848. He was so very anxious to go to Council Bluffs and keep up with the Church, so the children and I went to work and got things ready and the next July 1848 came to Council Bluffs, Iowa. We stayed there about 2 years. We worked and got things ready to come to the valleys.

I and my 5 boys and 2 girls started with a company of 100 wagons June 10, 1850. We traveled across the plains with ox teams. Had many a struggle. Altho we got along much better than we anticipated.

The first of Sept. we landed in Salt Lake without any home or anyone to hunt one for us. We were very lonesome indeed.

We stayed with Father and Mother Wilcox for 2 weeks, when Enos Curtis came along and said he would furnish me and the children with a home. Thats what we need most as winter was coming on.

We were married Oct. 18, 1850. Lived on the Jordan the first winter and I and my children all had irricipiliss of the throat. My oldest son died with it on Mar. 5, 1851. He drove the ox team across the plains for me, and a kind good natured boy as ever lived.

The next April we moved to Springville. Got a farm and a place to build up the kingdom. On Oct. 18, 1851 I had a girl born called Clarrissa Curtis. We lived there and the boys grew up and Enos Curtis and his boys and mine all worked together. Raised their grain and stock and paid their tithing. I had a girl born Feb. 23, 1853. Called her name Belinda. We still lived there in Springville. The next spring Enos Curtis went to Iron County with Brigham Young and company.

When they got back they made a party for the company on the 12th day of June 1854 and one year from that day I had a pair of twin girls named one Adelia and one Amelia.

The next spring my husband was complaining of not feeling well but he kept on to work for a while till at last he gave up. After a while he began to take something and thot he was better but he finally got worse. Lived till the first of June 1856 when he passed off just like going to sleep without a struggle or a groan.

His children were all with him but two. One boy was on a mission to England. Myself and boys and 3 little girls were left alone again. One boy was 20 years old. One 17, one 14 and the other 12. We still lived in Springville. Farmed and raised our wheat and stock, paid our tithing and raised the little girls all but one.

She took sick and died before her father. One of the twins named Adelia.

In 1857, I was sealed to John W. Curtis at April Conference and I had a girl born Jan. 16, 1858 called her name Mariette Curtis and I had 5 boys and 4 girls by Albert Miner 4 girls by Enos Curtis (1 girl by John W. Curtis). I had 58 Grandchildren and great grandchildren. Belinda Curtis took sick and died Nov. 17, 1873. I was sealed to John W. Curtis as his 3rd wife. Still live in Springville, Utah.

The children that lived all grew up to be men and women. All married and left home. All in the church and pay their tithing and live their religion as best they can as far as I know. I had 14 children in all and they were all very good and kind to me.

Mr. Albert Miner was Joseph Smith's life guard in Kirtland. Also my brother, but he left the church. In those days there was but a handful of saints in comparison to what there is now.

I have passed thru all the hardships and drivings and burnings and mobbing and there as have been with the Saints in all their persecutions from Huron Co. to Kirtland Ohio from Kirtland to Missouri back to Illinois and then across the desert.

I write this that my children may have a little idea of what their parents passed through. For want of time I have passed over some of the important things.

I hope my children will appreciate these few lines for I do feel highly honored to be numbered with the Latter Day Saints and I pray that our children will all prove faithful that they may receive a great reward. And if this falls into the hands of Polly Ann Whipple boys, alright, William Whipple or Orson Whipple.

I want this to fall into hands of those who belong to the church and I direct this to my granddaughter Ruth Miner or Mary Rosalee or Emma Amelia Miner or Hannah Clark my great grand daughter.

This from Tamma Miner and Albert Miner and Tamma Curtis and Enos Curtis.

Jan. 30 1885 Tamma Durfee Miner passed this life at the age of 71 years 10 mo. 24 days leaving nine children, 95 grandchildren besides a vast circle of friends to mourn her loss. She died at the home of her Dtr. Polly Miner Carter in Provo, Utah, who had cared for her in her declining years.

By a life of virtue and unflinching integrity as well as by her many excellent traits of character she had endeared herself to all.

She died and she lived in full faith of the Gospel and a glorious resurrection.

The funeral was held in The Old White meeting house in Springville, Utah. Monday 2 Feb. 1885. She was buried in the Springville City Cemetery.

Son-in-law

After her death her sons erected a monument to her grave.

In 1930 Moroni Miner the only surviving child seeded the lawn and paid $100.00 for perpetual care and upkeep of the lot where his mother is buried at the side of her second husband, Enos Curtis.

JOHN MINOR, FATHER OF GREENE CO., PA.

John Minor and Jeremiah Glassgow. These two young men, for the love of adventure, and with a view of shaping destiny for themselves about the spring of 1764, equipped with haversack, tomahawk and gun, turned their backs upon pleasant homes at Williamsport, Maryland, to brave the hardships and fatigues and dangers of the untrodden domain of the west. In the course of events they visited Redstone Fort and made tomahawk improvements of lands on Redstone creek, subsequently, and perhaps yet, owned by the Lynn heirs. This done they retraced their steps and domiciled during the winter with their friends at home. (marking trees around a tract of land by hacking and glazing with a hatchet was denominated a tomahawk improvement and was recognized at that day as vesting the individual with prima facia right to the premises). The next spring profiting no doubt by the school or experience of the previous season, they again marched forth for another summer campaign. Revisiting the valley of the Monogahela, and extending their tour of observation and inspection, they concluded to abandon their claim on the Redstone and commit their fortunes to the unexplored regions west of the deep, still river. Out of all that vast interminal waste of magnificent territory, John Minor made a choice of the farm now owned by his grandson namesake, (john) on Whitely creek, half a mile west of Mapletown and proceeded to establish his inalienable right thereto by the accustoned "tomahawk improvements". He improved in like manner the farm adjoining, now owned by the heirs of Noah Minor, deceased, for his brother William Minor, and for his next of kin Zachary Gapen. Glassgow explored the country on Dunkard creek and selected lands near the site of Mt. Morris, owned now by the Donley heirs and made good his claim, as he supposed, by a free use of his "little hatchet". Again the two bold woodsmen retired from the lonely scenesof the deep and awful solitudes to while away the wintry hours with loved friends and rehearse to them the exciting story of their wonderful adventure. In the spring of 1766, or thereabouts, a train of great hearted and iron nerved emigrants, consisting of John Minor, Jeremiah Glassglow, William Minor and Zachary Gapen, with their families, set out from the valley of Conecocheague to journey to the land of promise; and after trudging many a tedious, tiresome day over mountain heights and wilderness wastes, reached and passed the heaven of their hopes. Glassglow, however, found upon his arrival that his choice of future possession was then preoccupied by Goliah of the forest by the name of Scott. Glassglow claimed priority of right by reason of the tomahawk improvement made a year before, but the freebooter disregarding all convential ties had the right of possession and meant to maintain it. There existed therefore an irreconcilable disparity of interest. There could be no recourse to civil process, an invention as yet unknown to Greene county soil. Each man must be a law unto himself, the enforcement of which depended entirely upon the amount of will and muscle power which he possessed. There was no arbiter but the god of battles to which the appeal was made. They simply agreed to fight and let the disputed title be vested by conquest.

The preliminaries of fixing place and time was speedily arranged, and then they separated each to make his individual preparations for the desperate conflict. Glassgow secured the services of his tried and tue friend, John Minor, to be his second and when at the appointed time the clans gathered for "business", and Minor saw the physical giant his friend had for an antagonist, he endeavered to disuade them from the onset. To Glassgow he appealed to desist the unequal contest, reasoning that land was abundant and to be had for the taking. To both he earnestly appealed, saying it was an arbitrary and uncivilized method of settling disputes, and could but end in serious bodily injury to one or both. But the freebooter met all these fine spun theories with the simple assertion that they were but the device of cowardice, which put an end to all diplomacy. There was no alternative now but to clear away the brush, give the gladiators a fair field and let them sail in.

Glassgow was not nearly so large and powerful as Scott, and yet he was no pigmy. He was every inch a man, and a man of superior prowess, squarely built, wiry, and as active as an acrobat. The assailants approached each other with calm determination, and at the first round Glassgow went straight to the grass as also on the second and third, at each successive stroke of the ponderous fist wielded by the brawny arm of that practiced woodsman. But eluding the fourth pass of that "sledge hammer of death," he closed with his assailant and threw him heavily to the ground. Lifting him as a child Scott regained his feet but to go speedily down by the dextrous tripping of the plucky little man. Again and again the process of rising but to fall went on. Finally out of wind and much bruised by reason of his repeated falls, the big man became an easy victom and Glassgow succeeded in thrashing him to the satisfaction of both, and thus secured to himself and his heirs and assigns forever an indisputable title to all the lands and hereditaments that day in dispute.

COL. JOHN MINOR

Honor to whom honor is due. The subject of this article brought the families of his brother William Minor, Zachary Gapen, and others to the greene county in a very early day. John was the youngest brother of William and was born in London Co., Va., in the year of 1744. After the death of his father he lived with his brother William who settled in Washington county, Maryland until he commenced his adventures among the aborigines of the western forest. Seeing his brother comfortably established in his new home on the Whitely creek, west of the Monongahela, and having built for himself a snug and cozy cabin and made other necessary improvements, he went back to the land of Conococheaque the next year and having married the sister of General Otho Williams of Revolutionary War renown, returned with his bride on horseback to the land of his adoption. Perched up behind her all that long and rugged way sat George, the little negro servant lad. Otho, the first born was rocked by George in a sugar trough, the rude cradle of the primitive life.

John Minor, having led the way in settling the country west of the river, maintained a leadership in all that concerned the development of the country and the interest of the settlers. For many years, he owned the largest estate of any individual within the present Greene County. He built the first flouring mill erected west of the Monogahela. Over 100 years ago an unpretentious water mill, located about 100 yards above the site of the present one, did the grist grinding for the sparse inhabitants, near and far.

And in the after years when increased patronage demanded increased capacity, the present structure regarded by many as the old Minor mill, was built by the same proprietor. During the decade of peace from 1764 to 1774 this flourishing settlement was on terms of confiding intimacy and neighborly conduct with the natives. Indians were not so much objects of dread as beasts of prey. All southwestern Pennsylvania was regarded as northwestern Virginia and indeed whilst both states claimed jurisdiction neither exercised it, and the people became a law unto themselves. John Minor, however held a Colonel's commission from the Governor of Virginia, and was recognized by the settlers as commander in chief of all the militia in the territory. Under the instructions of General Morgan he superintended the constuction of stockade forts at various points as mediums of observations, and appointed spies or rangers to each whose duty it was to watch vigilantly the movements of hostile parties, and apprize the settlers of approaching danger.

It is a matter of history that one of the most extraordinary expeditions during the Revolution was that of Col. George Rogers Clarke, in 1778, against the British posts on the Mississippi and Wabash Rivers. All this vast territory west was recognized as belonging to Virginia and was subsequently ceded to the general government: Col. Clarke was commissioned by the Governor of Virginia. He enlisted a regiment of about three hundred picked soldiers. "Crossed the mountains to the Monogahela, embarked in boats and descended to the falls of the Ohio, where he was joined by some volunteers from Kentucky." But what is most interesting to us is left unrecorded. Very few indeed know that the flotilla of boats which transported this immortal army with its munitions of war was constructed under the personal supervision of Col. Minor, at or near Dunkard creek. The first attempt to build these boats was frustrated by a sudden descent of a large party of Indians which dispersed the workman, and demolished and set adrift the work accomplished. But the company of craftsmen was quickly reorganized and the project carried forward to a speedy and accomplished success. In this connection, it may be interesting to relate that a returning prisoner informed Col. Minor that during the progress of this work certain Indians one day lay concealed nearby and were much tempted to shoot him, which they would have done had it not been for a wish to first capture a "white Squaw" who was making maple sugar in the famous sugar camp owned by the late David Wolf. By some fortunate turn of affairs she became apprized of their presence, and they were foiled of their evil intent. That woman was the great-grandmother of Jacob and Ambrose Dilliner, who still possess valuable estates along the river in that vicinity.

Whenever the Indians would make a raid upon the settlement, Col. Minor would organize a flying brigade of daring militia and hotly pursue the savages; and many an exciting chase has led from the Monogahela back to the Ohio. Upon these occasions it required the utmost precaution to prevent ambuscade by day and surprise by night. No camp fires at any time could be permitted. Either curling smoke when sun was up or flaming coals when darkness prevailed might lead to a fatal betrayal. On one occasion whilst all else in camp was wrapped in sleep, his vigilant ear detected foot falls slyly and cautiously approaching. By lying close to the ground he could observe something between him and they sky beyond, resembling an Indian on all fours sneaking toward the camp. Leveling his rifle he fired. And with the sharp crack was succeeded by a shrill "yaup", revealing the regretful fact of the death of a favorite dog that had been forbidden to follow.

Both his and Williams cabins were fortified as stockades and were known as the Minor forts, to which all the soldiers round about resorted in case of an alarm. It was in John Minor's fort that the celebrated conch shell, now a relic in the possession of his grand-daughter, Mrs. P.L. Kramer, of Greensboro, did signal service in alarming the neighborhood of dangers both real and imaginary. Upon one occasion the clarion notes of that quaint old sentinel cleft the air full loud and clear for miles around flying feet heeded the warning voice. But Col. Minor and his boy were in the clearing some distance from home, and having been victimized by several false alarms made no haste to obey the summons. Much anxiety being felt for his safety, a man was sent to see why he had not come. Almost out of breath the messenger exclaimed, "why, Colonel, did you not hear the alarm? It was reported that you and George were killed and that Williams fort was attacked by the Indians and all the inmates butchered!" He cooly replied, "why man, you already preceive that the report is half lie, for George and I are both unharmed." But having heard the repeated reports of a gun in the southern direction he deemed it prudent to hasten homeward. Placing things to rights in and about the fort, he summoned a reconnoitering party to scour the country and seek out the savages. On big hill, either where Dissiway South now lives, or the next one southward near the old Elijah South property, they found the lifeless bodies of an old man by the name of Voshel and his son. They had been shot down, scalped and horribly mangled. Having committed this unprovoked murder, the perpetrators made precipitate retreat. In July, 1781, he was appointed to fill an unexpired term of Justice of the Peace in Cumberland township, Washington county. April 15, 1782, he was reappointed to the same office for the same township and continued in office two terms. The Justice of the Peace commissioned at that time to the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas and of the Orphans Court.

During all these years of trail and progress, green county was yet unknown. Thus far she slumbered in the quiet embrace of Washington county. But the fertile and pleasant valley of Dunkard, Whitely, Muddy and Tenmile creeks had all the while been inviting and enticing emigrants from South and East and North till the "South," as it was then called, began to be a power and exert an influence in the body politic. The new county project began to be agitated and Col. John Minor was selected in the campaign in 1792 as the candidate for the Legislature upon the new county issue. Though located in the extreme southeast corner of a large district his personal popularity was such that he was triumphantly elected. He matured a bill for the organization of Greene county at his first session, but it was defeated in the Legislature. Again, in the year 1793, he was a candidate upon the same issue and was again elected. Again he introduced his new county bill, and again had the chagrin of seeing it defeated. Nothing daunted by these repeated failures, hisput him forward for a third term but through the treacherous and perfidious misrepresentations of a dishonorable and opposing neighbor, he was beaten. In the fourth year he was re-elected, when on the 9th of February 1796, the bill passed both houses of the legislature that organized Greene county into a "free and independent county". At his suggestion the Governor appointed Stephen Gapen, Isaac Jenkinson, William Meetiak, and James Seals commissioners, to procure any quantity of land, not exceeding 500 acres, within five miles of the center of the county, to survey and lay out the same in town lots; and to sell sufficient of them, which together with certain taxes, would enable them to construct a court house and prison. And the log structure (now occupied by Daniel Anderson) on Greene St. was the architectural prodigy which resulted from this arrangement. Until said public buildings could be erected the Courts of the new county were to be held at the house of Jacob Kline, on Muddy creek, situated on lands now owned by Eli Long, adjoining the farm he resides on; and under the protection of a fort, a portion of whose ruins can yet be seen. As the first Associate Judges he procured the appointment of John Flenniken, David Grey and John Badolet. The Governor appointed out of personal compliment John Minor himself as one of the Judges. However, as certain of his political enemies who were jealous of his popularity, took exceptions to his holding office as Judge while retaining his seat in the Legislature, he resigned his commission, but the Governor seeing the aimus that actuated his enemies, reserved the appointment till the legislative term expired, and then re-commissioned Col. Minor to the office of associate judge.

During all the excitement of the incident, the disgraceful "whiskey rebellion" which so agitated the western counties in 1794, and left such a humilitating page upon the history of Washington, Fayette, and Allegheny, it is not a matter of record, so far as my research extends, that any man within the present limits of Greene county was convicted of complicity. Though the Hon. John Minor took an active part in the endeavor, to avoid any serious complications he did it as a loyal man, counseling allegiance on the part of the citizen, and lenience and conciliation on the part of the state. A Villianous partisan by false accusation having caused the arrest of Rev. John Corbly, Col. Minor rode all the way to Philadelphia to secure his release but the authorities having become convinced of his innocence, already discharge him from further custody. (This trip was in excess of 500 miles and he was around 50 years old.)

Col. Minor met the army, finally sent out by the government to supress this formidable insurrection, at "Great Meadows." He went on a mercy mission in the interest of peace. In the course of consultation with the Staff Officers, General Morgan made some sneering and depreciative remark in reference to the western people, which Col. Minor indignantly resented as an insult. Hot words were passed and blows would have resulted but for the timely interference of mutual friends who effected a reconciliation.

John Minor, being in Baltimore in early life, concluded to purchase a wench as a present to his brother William's wife, was an excessively fleshy woman and therefore not fleet and active to do chores and general house work. Reparing to a vessel where slaves were advertised for sale, he told the master his errand and also remarked that he wanted a woman without relatives, for he had such an inconvenient conscience as would not consent to being the means of separating families. The slave driver had one to suit. The terms were agreed upon and the money paid, but when the girl was about to leave the hold of the ship, she gave a hideous and plantive shriek. Upon inquiry it was found that she had a husband. Indignant at the practiced deception, Minor demanded his money, absolutely refusing to take the girl. But ready for any emergency, the slave dealer proposed to sell him the man also. Finally a bargain was struck and with the two, "Ratcliff" for himself and "Sal" for his sister-in-law, he set off for home. In after years a number of young slaves was the result of the marital relation existing between Ratcliff and Sal. By the laws regulating slave business, the issue would belong to William Minor, the owner of the mother, by an understanding between the brothers, John retained males and William the females. They had one son -George- who was the last slave in Greene Co. and one of the two last in the state. Several daughters were born and it is said that as William Minor's own daughters grew up (?) and were married, at each successive wedding a daughter of old Sal was sold and the proceeds were given to the bride as a "settling out" (? only one daughter) Ratcliff died, choked to death by a sliver of bone from a piece of sausage which he was eating. The widow married a slave of Zachary Gapens, "Dick Sterling", a pompous negro once in the service of Lord Sterling. They had a son "Dick" whom the Gapens claimed as their property. But he was replevined and recovered by William Minor as the records of our Greene Co. court show. The colored man, George, lived with the Minors, a kind of privileged character till he was very old. I believe that his master, John Minor, made a provision in his will making it incumbent on his heirs to keep him, giving him the privilege of choosing with whom he should live. Possessing a great natural affection, he started on a pilgrimage, in his old and decrepit days, in search of one of his two surviving sisters, and by the merest accident in his wanderings about the city of Pittsburgh he met with Sal; and it is said that the meeting was peculiarly affecting, both expressing the most excessive raptures of joy.

Geneva and having heard of Col. John Minor as a man of culture as well as of adventure - as a man of influence as well as of fine social parts - concluded to stroll over and make his acquaintance. Attired in true original highland costume, with leather breeches and knee bucklers and hunting shirt, he took his rifle and set out on foot. Walking somewhat rapidly, he became warm and wet with sweat. Pushing his way through the dense woods then predominated twixt Greensboro and Mapletown, and furtively peering through the tangled thicket he thought he saw an Indian pointing a gun at him. Instantly he was under cover. Remaining concealed for some time he again ventured to steal another glance at the savage. And again he was made to duck his head, for the apparition was still aiming the deadly weapon. Crouching and cautiously creeping closer to the object of his terror, his hopes of getting the first shot, he was somewhat chagrined to discover that was but an imaginary Indian, some broken limbs having lodged in such position as to give the exact appearance of a man with a gun to his shoulder ready to fire. The delay and consequent contact with the damp ground cooled him off too suddenly and he caught a cold which resulted in a severe jaw ache. Arriving at Minor's cabin and Minor being absent, he made himself known to the lady of the house, who tendered the hospitalities of the house, and made a great poultice of scorched flax and tow and vinegar, and bound it on her guests face to ease his pain. Such was the condition of affairs when Minor came in from his hunt with a deer on his back. Walking into the cabin, as was the custom of those days, he slung the deer from his shoulder into the middle of the floor, when upon looking around, he saw to his surprise a man of superior bearing arising to greet him. Mr. Gallatin at once made himself known, explaining that Minor's "good wife" had tied his head up in tow to cure his aches, and which had acted like a charm. This was the beginning of an intimacy that soon ripened into a fast and fervid friendship. Gallatin, though a citizen of Fayette Co., was afterwards, much through the influence of John Minor, elected by the District of Washington and Greene to represent it in the Congress of the United States. Gallatin being a member of Congress and Minor a member of the States Legislature, both of which bodies met at the same time in Philadelphia. They journeyed on horseback together to and from the sessions of their respective legislative bodies. Gallatin was emphatically a man of moods. At times for long weary miles he was reticent and grim and companionless. But then his mood would change and in an hour after he would be all aglow with bewitching vivacity, sparkling with wit and eloquent with wisdom.

In the early days before Greene County was born, the settlers had to go to "Catfish", now Little Washington, to attend court while justice was dispensed in a stable and afterwards in a log cabin. On one occasion John Minor and others went over to attend assizes of jurors or on other legal business. The party equipped themselves for a regular encampment, there being no accommodations there for the comfort of lodgers. They slept in a husk pen, and next morning early had their camp kettle hung over the fire on the usual contrivance of forks and pole cooking their game for breakfast. A great gauky, but muscular fellow came sauntering along, and with malice aforethrought deliberately kicked over the camp kettle, dumping the contents into the ashes. Minor, who was sitting on a log close by, observing the transaction, deliberately arose, and striking the intruder a stunning blow on the neck, knocked him heels over head over the camp kettle. The fellow arose, and after staring Minor all over from head to feet stepped up to him and said: "Right stranger, give me your hand; right, by God." They then formed a more intimate acquaintance and were good friends from that hour. The manner of introductions have changed very much since then, and though our receptions may be more cordial they are certainly not more impressive.

I have noticed John Minor was defeated the third time he was a candidate for the Legislature, a german element on the north side who had previously supported him now threw their influences against him. Having been prevailed upon to be candidate for the fourth time, in order to subserve the south side interest, he visited his former German friends personally, and insisted on knowing why they had changed their minds. Finally they answered that they had been told that he should have said that the "Dutch were all tories during the Revolution and ought not now to be trusted with civil offices." Having never uttered such sentiments, he gave it a positive and indignant denial, and demanded the name of the author of the scandal. Whereupon, they told him of one H__. a Federal from his own neighborhood, had put the report in circulation. He told them to meet him at the county seat on a certain day of court, and then he would convince them that it was a base falsehood.

Mr. H. was a very pompous individual--aristocratic in his demeanor and pretentious in society. Upon this particular occasion he was in kid glove company of the gentry, about to enter the court house, when accosted by Mr. Minor. Minor took his hand with a powerful grip and asked him why he had circulated such a base libel upon him. At first he attempted a denial, but finding that course impractical, he plead that in politics men were privileged to use such means to secure their ends. "Not with me," said Minor; and drawing a rawhide from beneath the collar of his coat, he said: "Retract the infamous lie or I'll cut the coat from your back." H--, having made the amend honorable, Minor released his hand from him, saying, "take your hand, unfit longer to remain in that of an honest man." The game was a desperate one. It succeeded, however: the Germans were satisfied. He was triumphantly elected by their votes; the bill for the new county was again pressed forward and passed finally; and Greene County was immediately organized.

St. Andrews Chew Magna, Somerset, England, 1981

REUNION AT CHEW MAGNA

This historic visit to the home of Thomas was conceived in the fall of 1977 when my wife and I visited that lovely village as part of a European trip. John Barker, Vicar of St. Andrew's Church, was most cordial and generous with his time as he took us on a tour of Thomas' church. It was an unusually exciting moment for us.

John called us at our hotel later that evening, suggesting we get together again before our departure so that we might explore the possibility of a Miner/Minor reunion at Chew Magna. Out of that meeting over tea the next afternoon the first reunion of the descendants of Thomas was developed - and some 80 cousins from the United States and Canada joined in a visit with the people of Chew Magna in late September, 1979.

About 135 descendants of Thomas donated funds for the creation of a plaque commemorating the life and work of Thomas which was placed on the wall of Lady Chapel in St. Andrew's Church. It was dedicated at The Harvest Festival Service in the church on 30 September 1979. There were sufficient funds remaining to present something over 500 pounds to the church to assist in its re-roofing project.

It was during our visit to Chew Magna that the Thomas Minor Society was founded. Its purpose is to honor and perpetuate the memory of Thomas and his descendants, to collect and preserve genealogical records of the family and to foster a spirit of fellowship among its members.

Three lectures were delivered during our visit and they are recorded here in the book especially for those who were unable to make the trip. The remarks of John Ashley, Historian at Chew Magna, are excerpted from tape made at the time, as were the remarks of Ian Durham. They give a remarkable in-sight of the Chew Magna of Thomas' day, and earlier.

John Ashley read a number of very early wills and found that our Thomas was actually the youngest of nine children. Records available to us, previously, indicated that Clement, Thomas' father, had but four children so we were most pleased with this new discovery.

Thomas' brother, Clement, lived on Christmas Street in Bristol in 1683. We were delighted to find that two of his descendants live with their families today in that same area -

Martyn Miner and his brother, John. Their genealogical line is reproduced elsewhere in the book.

CHEW MAGNA IN THOMAS' TIME

Remarks of Roger Ashley, Historian
Excerpted

Documents began to come forth about the 16th century which help make it possible to say something about the background from which Thomas came.

England was then somewhat of a pioneering colony. It had at the beginning of the century about three million people. By the end of the century there were five million. By about the time of Thomas' departure, people of 1600 were already talking of forced immigration. "We must send people abroad."

At that same time, people were seeing a revolution in religion and in culture. The greatest revolution, possibly, was spiritual -- the Reformation -- the breaking away from the world-wide Catholic Church and the establishment of The Church of England. One might think, perhaps, that Thomas' departure for America was accelerated by the changes within the Church in the Parish at Chew Magna, in that Diocese -- in England.

The country in Thomas' day, a population of possibly five million, was ruled over by something like 1,000 to 2,500 "politically concious gentlemen." They ran the government in London, in the counties and more locally, in the parishes such as Chew Magna. They fought for the office of Sheriff of the county; they fought for the office of Justice of the peace; a most competitive society.

When the church was assailed by the politicians in the 1530's and 1540's it was the harsh, grasping Tudor landowners who went in and took what had been given to the Church over a period of perhaps a thousand years. They took back, they said, what their ancestors had given.

There was a revolution in land-holding in 16th century England. It could be contrasted to what happened in the Norman Conquest of 1066 or possibly what happened in the break-up of the great English estates between 1918 and 1921. In Somerset County, so far as the revolution in the Church and the revolution in land-holdings was concerned, between the years 1547 and 1549, some 121 manors changed hands - and Edward Seymour who became Chief of Somerset because his sister had produced the male heir which Henry the Eighth so badly wanted, became owner of Chew Court.

The Church during that time suffered greatly. There was an enormous amount of destruction in the 1540's. Roods were pulled down; screens disappeared; stained glass windows were smashed. All this must have taken place in the time of Clement Minor, grandfather of Thomas. He must have seen all this going on. He died in North Elms, a tailor, in 1573. He must have seen enormous changes.

By 1600, the Elizabethian Church had become quite powerful and it took a stong position against the Puritan Party; this, in Thomas' time. The Queen hated extreme religion, as Puritanism was considered.

By 1634, 170 Somerset altars were forcibly put back at the east end of the churches. If you were a Puritan, this would have had a shattering effect on you. By 1640, Mary, the last-living Minor in Chew Magna, had died. One brother had gone to America, the other to Brislington, near Bristol. Two years after that the country was at war.

The first mention of a Minor in the Chew Magna Parish in the 16th century was in 1523. It was William but we don't know his relationship to Thomas. He paid four pence as tax on worth of two pounds. Clement, Thomas' grandfather, acted as a witness to a farmer in 1556. Again, in 1572, witness to another farmer. He himself died in 1573 leaving a will: "Thomas Minor, a Chew tailor, to the Church at Chew, four pounds; to son Clement (our Thomas' father), one lamb; to daughter Edith, one lamb --- all other goods to Joan my wife ..." will proved in 1574.

From the wills I've looked at, we have slightly revised the Minor's descent at this end of it. Thomas, buried in 1573 and has three children: Clement, Edith and John. Edith we know nothing more about. Clement, living until 1639 has nine children: Joan, born and buried in 1586; John, christened 1587, buried 1597; Joan, christened 1589, buried 1628; Mary, born 1592, buried 1640; Elizabeth, christened 1594, married John Tompkins in 1629; Jane, born and buried in 1595; Edith, christened 1597, married Thomas Buck in 1623; Clement, christened in 1600; Thomas, your Thomas, the youngest son, christened in 1608, the youngest of nine, four of whom pre-deceased him. So, the chances of Thomas making the crossing to America earlier than he did were fairly thin.

Thomas' uncle, John, Thomas Minor's other son, too, had nine children. Here were eighteen children born through the two main branches of the Minors of this period. Another Thomas -- which makes it so complicated -- another Thomas born in 1588; John, christened in 1592, died 1599; John, christened 1600; buried 1627; Henry, christened 1602; Peter, christened 1606; Thomas, christened 1610; Clement, born and buried 1610; Bridgit, christened 1612; Jane, christened 1615.

On the English side, there is Clement of the eldest son, Clement, Jr., if you like, who produces himself two sons -- William, who is living in Bristol on Christmas Street in 1683, and Israel, who marries Elizabeth Jones of Brislington which at the time was a small village some miles from Bristol. There has been continuous descent of the English branch of the Minor family in Brislington from 1640 to the present day.

The will of Mary, daughter of Clement, the sister of your Thomas -- she died in 1640. She was the last Minor living in Chew Magna and in her will she leaves several pounds to non-Minors, and to William Mynor, son of Clement Minor, one pound; and to others, her sister's children, several pounds. The value of her estate was fifty-five pounds, two shillings and two pence.

DESCRIPTION OF CHEW MAGNA FROM EARLY TIMES TO THE PRESENT

Remarks of Ian Durham, Historian
Excerpted

(Compiler's note: these remarks were transcribed from a tape made at the time of delivery. Try as I might, some of the words simply were not decipherable, thus, the quotation marks around some words.)

Chew Magna, or Bishop's Chew, as it was otherwise called, was established in late Saxon times. The Chew Manor existed before the Norman Conquest when it belonged to Godwin, Earl of Wessex, and in 1062 King Edward The Confessor granted it to his chaplain "Geso", and appointed him Bishop of Wells.

This grant was not interfered with by the invasion of William of Normandy, and in Doomsday Book in 1086 it is recorded that the area of land subject to tax in the Manor was 3,600 acreas of which the Bishop farmed 1,200 acres, doubtlessly with a stewart in charge and 53 workers who varied from slaves to freemen. The remainder of the land was let out to five principal tenants and 45 smaller tenants.

There were 100 acres of meadow, probably along the banks of the river and the Windford Brook and 50 acres of pasture, probably, up the hill. Also, there was a wood two miles long by one-half mile wide. Along the water courses there were five mills for grinding corn, the three most highly rated belonging to the Bishop.

Without doubt, much of the land was organized on the usual three-field system of feudal days and we still have field names indicating where were the west, north and east fields.

Valued at forty-four pounds and five shillings in the currency of the time, this manor was a valuable asset in Medieval days. A little later, its value increased still further for within its boundaries lay the quarries which provided stones for the new churches being built all over Bristol and proved a continuous and considerable income for the Bishop.

So, in the early Middle ages, there would be five to six hundred people living in the area of the Manor with many of them on out-lying farms. The village itself with a population of 200 was quite small and the primitive houses made of wood and thatch would have been closely grouped around the then Manor House on the site of the present-day Chew Court. The town power and the ecclesiastical powers were combined there in the regime of the Bishop who was both Rector and Lord of the Manor.

The Lord of the Manor and his large entourage would only visit the village for periods, two or three times a year when Chew Magna would become his administrative center while his establishment lived off the products of the whole farm and off the tithes collected in his name. A field on the southern slopes of Blacklands is still called Vineyards and is probably the area where vines were cultivated to produce wine for the Bishop's table. The terracing is still quite easy to see.

While in residence, the Bishop also dealt with Diocesan affairs. It was from Chew Magna in 1499 that Bishop Oliver King issued instructions to the Prior of Bath to proceed with the building of Bath Abbey. He would also sit in judgement in matters both secular and ecclesiastical as relating to the Manor and the Diocese. for instance, in 1335, his Court tried Nicholas "La Brey" who was accused of laying violent hands on Mr. "Bindo".

After the Reformation, there was considerable pressure exerted by the State on the Church to hand over the Manors, especially to royal favorites like Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset. Chew was one of a large number of Manors sold to Somerset by Bishop Barlow in 1548. And at the same time much of the house at Chew was demolished and the stone sold. So ended nearly 500 years of the administration of the Manor of Chew Magna by the Bishops of Bath and Wells.

It was about this time when the very close connection with the Bishop was coming to an end that "Leland" wrote "Chute is a pretty clothing town. There have been good making of cloth in the town." And wills of the period substantiate this. In 1543, Richard Parsons of Chew left to his son Thomas "a narrow loom if so be he goes to the weaving craft or else to go to one of his younger brothers after the discretion of his wife."

We also know it was from a clothmaker's family in Chew Magna that John "Chumpneys" became Lord Mayor of London and was knighted in 1534.

The woolen industry certainly left its mark on some of the local field names, like "Flaxacre", "Rack Hay" and "Tucking Mead", but it declined and an historian in 1791 recorded that the village's only manufacture are a few edged tools and stockings. The tools were agricultural implements.

Another historian writing in 1829 about earlier times, said that "Chew Magna was formerly a large market town but the privileges associated with such status had already been lost in the 18th century but the town is still of considerable extent though with some appearance of decay." He gave the population as 1,884.

Let us now consider how the village has developed. The topography of Chew Magna is very significant as the tithe map of 1840 shows. The village is situated on higher ground on a slight spur between the River Chew and the Windford Brook coming in from the west. Probably the first settlement grew up here because the river could be crossed nearby. The all important Tun Bridge is almost certainly medieval. That is to say, it was built before 1500. The river and the stream were important for the siting of water-driven mills. Five of these are mentioned in Doomsday. There are four on the 1840 map.

Let us use the Tithe Map to trace the development of the village. The site of the Saxon and early medieval settlement was in the area around the church and probably included the nearby narrow streets. The market would be held in the wider part of Chew Street, probably out in front of The Old School Room, just outside of the Church yard.

The subsequent settlements grew up on the fringe of the original village in the 18th and 19th centuries. The village today looks much like it did on the Tithe Map of 1840.

There are in the village thirteen items listed as ancient monuments, most located in the old village center:

- First, The Church of St. Andrew, mainly 14th and 15th centuries. Also, the steps and the shaft of the old stone cross.
- Second, the former Church House, now known as The Old Schoolroom, built in the 15th and 16th centuries.
- Third, Chew Court, 14th and 15th centuries, but much replaced later. And the well-head in the grounds of Chew Court, presumably of the same date.
- Fourth, Tun Bridge, supposed to be 15th century or earlier.
- Fifth, Dumper's Farmhouse of the 14th and 15th and 16th centuries.

- The others, built in the 18th century, are also listed as ancient monuments.

It is possible that Queen Edith, wife of Edward the Confessor, built the first church here, for she owned the Manor before it was given to "Geso" the Bishop. Such a building would have been of timber and no trace remains. There are remains of a Norman Church built in the eleven hundreds and of this period we have some buttresses and some stones at the bottom of the wall at the east end of the present chancel, and the font.

The church we know today is mainly of the 13th to the 15th centuries of the early English and the perpendicular styles. It is fairly large, reflecting both the prosperity of the woolen industry and its local importance. The tower, which seems to many to be the most memorable part of the church, seems to have been erected in the late fourteen hundreds and is about 100 feet tall.

The north aisle is also a fairly late development and we have Sir John St. Lo leaving sixteen pounds toward the building of the tower in 1443. The north porch has been much admired. Other features to be noted on the outside are the gargoyles and several scratch dials, the earliest kind of clock.

There seems to have been a clock in the tower since the early seventeen hundreds and in 1754 we find the vestry paying 26 shillings and four pence for keeping it in order. The present day clock was given by Mrs. Adlum of the Manor House in 1903 and plays a verse of a hymn every four hours with a different hymn tune for each day of the week. The lighting of the clock-face was installed to commemorate the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II.

There are now eight bells in the tower. The original six were re-cast in 1735. They were again re-cast and rehung to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria in 1897. Many such bells are inscribed and on the great bell here in St. Andrew's you may read: "I to the Church the living call and to the grave do summon all."

The inside of the church -- the screen is noteworthy, possibly part of the original rood screen. The Strachie Chapel contains many memorials to the family who for many centuries owned Sutton Court, now in a separate parish.

Across the church is the Baber Chapel and a very different kind of monument. The Babers came from fairly humble origins but in the 17th century they owned Chew Court and were Lords of the Manor. This chapel used to contain a gallery and a private pew for the Bishop. He could enter the church from the palace via a bridge over the path outside and through a door high up in the wall, where presently, an upper window is now located. It would be above the place where the plaque to Thomas Minor has been fixed. But the Babers took over the Chapel and in 1643 erected in it their very large monument. The Bishop's pew and gallery probably disappeared at that time and the door became a window. It is now known as Lady Chapel.

A strange monument is to be found in the south aisle. It is of a knight in mid 15th century armor, lying in a most uncomfortable position and is supposed to be Sir James de Hauteville but the last of them died about 200 years before that kind of armor was worn. The monument seems to have been brought into the Mother Church when the Norton Chantry Chapel was demolished in about 1547.

Chew Court was fully restored in the 19th century and again in 1976. The small 14th century gatehouse on the south side remains almost unchanged. The two outside turrets are very unusual. Chew Court, when it was the Bishop's Palace, was the medieval Manor House. Not to be confused with the house now called The Manor House, the convent school at the other end of the village. It was a residence and religious center for the Bishop of Bath and Wells.

The oldest part of the existing Court is the entrance tower. But there is something else which survives from the days of the Bishops - the old well which is beneath a small shelter.

In more recent times, the fortunes of the Court have varied greatly. At times, it was the home of a poor farmer. At other times it has been occupied by quite rich Lords of The Manor. Incidentally, the office of Lord of The Manor was bought and sold and the manorial rights have moved several times between this building and the present Manor House in Battle Lane (the convent school). It is a religious order and is the present Lord of the Manor.

At the entrance to the churchyard is the Old Schoolroom as we know it today. But, it has been called by many names. Often, and, quite correctly, it was called Church House. It is of late 15th or early 16th century construction and is fundamentally unchanged. This building may have been erected as part of the ecclesiastical establishment by the Bishop of Bath and Wells and used for administration purposes. It was probably built as a Parish Meetinghouse where church ales, wedding feasts and other parish celebrations and meetings could be held. Such church houses were being built at the end of the Middle Ages in parishes throughout the west country but few survive in such excellent and unaltered condition as this at Chew Magna.

The building was used to house the village school until 1894, taking over-flow classes when the new school proved to be insufficient right up to 1958. It then reverted to general social use but unfortunately it was allowed to get in a general state of very bad repair and was closed as unsafe in 1963. In 1969, grants were obtained from the Ministry of Historic Buildings and the Department of Education and Science for its repair. Those repairs are, as you have seen, completed.

THOMAS MINOR, THE EMIGRANT

Remarks of John A. Miner at Chew Magna Reunion

Ladies and gentlemen, I know you share great pleasure with me in welcoming each other to the place Thomas Minor called home. Many of us have journeyed here before but this is the first time since Thomas left this lovely village some 350 years ago that so many of his descendants have gathered to pay homage to the man who carried our name to America.

We have come from twenty-one states and the Commonwealth of Canada, with the largest contingent, sixteen, coming from the most distant state, California. From near and far, welcome!

We thank you for your many letters of encouragement as plans for this great occasion unfolded and grew into fruition. And we thank you and the many who could not be with us today for the contributions which made possible the plaque honoring Thomas Minor.

Each of us owes a special note of appreciation to John Barker, Vicar of St. Andrew's, for his early and on-going encouragement and supportive efforts on behalf of this important gathering. Indeed, we would not be here, today, were it not for his outstanding contribution. Thank you, John, very much.

Our journey from America took us from six to ten hours or so, depending upon the point of departure. The Lyons Whelp, carrying Thomas and his fellow passengers to Massachusetts, took approximately three months -- Three long, dreary months filled with hardships and privation, across a sea capable of destroying the hopes and morale of the strongest of men. But, cross the sea they did, by the tens of thousands. As a matter of fact, from the years 1628 to 1643, some 298 ships transported about 21,200 men, women and children to Massachusetts, alone!

We have all wondered, I am sure, why such a large migration and how did those who left these shores learn of the possibility, and details, of passage to America. There was no system of public advertising in the first-half of the seventeenth century, just word-of-mouth.

Bristol, just a few, short miles from this place, was the first maritime port which undertook the exploitation of the American Continent. It does not leave much to the imagination to believe our Thomas must have stood near a dock of that port watching the loading of passengers and goods destined for the new world. How his mind must have raced as he thought, one day, he, too, would be boarding a similar ship for that distant shore.

Charles Banks, author of The Planters of the Commonwealth, makes the statement that, "based on investigations of the origin of 2646 emigrants who arrived in Massachusetts between 1620 and 1650, Somerset County gave 134. West countrymen, that is, those from the counties of Dorset, Devon, Somerset and Cornwall, emigrated largely due to the opportunity to acquire land, promised to emigrants in lots of one hundred acres each -- almost a king's ransom in their estimation -- of which he could be owner in fee simple."

Now, it was not all that simple a process for Thomas or any would-be emigrant, for he, and persons of all classes had to secure permission from the Privy Council to leave the country. Banks looked upon this requirement as similar to our need to obtain passports, today, but I am inclined to believe this explanation was an over-simplification of the circumstances of the time surrounding such desired departures for America. Suffice it to say, having obtained the necessary permission, and finally arriving at his destination after many weeks of tossing on the restless and often, cruel, ocean, the emigrant either followed a prescribed course planned in advance or sat down to consider where he was and to make a choice of a habitation.

Perhaps some of his first thoughts, after his first good meal in several months, were of the strangeness of the scene around him, quite unlike anything he was accustomed to in his old parish home. He may have compared the plain wooden houses and their mud "chimbloys," as Thomas pronounced the word, with the picturesque stone cottages and their familiar brick chimneys in his native village. Instead of the gray, ivy-covered church of stone with its tower, he saw a barn-like structure which the people called a "meetinghouse". He surely saw a change in the faces of the people. There was no tipping of the hat to Lords and gentlemen.

If he had not come with a group to settle in a town already organized, he usually found welcome at an inn in Boston, Salem or Charlestown where he could obtain plenty of advice about the advantages of settlements already started or learn of plans for beginning new settlements on the ever-widening western fringes of out-lying villages. There was no limit to choice of a home in the wilderness, and emigrants made two, three or more moves before coming to a final halt. Land was free to him for the asking under easy conditions of permanency, and it is not strange that with all this boundless opportunity open to him, he still looked with longing eyes on every new settlement where he could enlarge acreage.

At the age of twenty-two, our own emigrant, Thomas Minor, took much this same approach. He left home and loved ones, sailed from Gravesend April 25, 1629 on the ship, Lyons Whelp. He was accompanied by more than forty planters and their families out of the counties of Dorset and Somerset.

Thomas arrived at Salem, Massachusetts in the middle of July. Shortly after his arrival, he left Salem, then called Pequot Harbor, in the face of a serious outbreak of Typhoid fever, moving on to Watertown. This stay, too, was brief and he re-traced his steps, moving on to Charlestown where, three years later, he became a founder of the First Church. Two years later, he was granted four acres of land at the Cambridge line and in 1637, owned a ten-acre plot. He was at that time twenty-nine years of age.

In 1634, Thomas married Grace, daughter of Walter Palmer, who had sailed from Gravesend in March of 1629. Their first child, John, was baptized at Charlestown in 1635. Thomas was twenty-eight. Two years later, Thomas moved from Newtown, now Cambridge, to Hingham, Massachusetts, where his children Clement, Thomas, Ephraim, and Joseph were baptized. So far, five boys -- very helpful on the farm!

At age thirty-eight, Thomas moved his family again, joining John Winthrop's Colony of Massachusetts in the settlement of Pequett, now New London, Connecticut. In 1649, at the age of forty-two, Thomas was appointed Military Sargeant and the following year, was made First Deputy to the General Court (legislature) at Hartford.

In 1652, Thomas once again moved his family, this time to Pawcatuck, now Stonington, Connecticut, co-founding the town with his friends William Chesebrough, Thomas Stanton and his father-in-law, Walter Palmer. The following year, 1653, Thomas began to record day-to-day activities, family and community affairs in a diary, an activity he was to continue until 1685.

Thomas' "log" was just that, a diary, no more, no less. It was in no way a journal, in the manner carried out by Governor Bradford or, later, John Winthrop. His entries were brief, cryptic notes of daily happenings, calendar entries and references to planting and harvesting crops. Yet, Thomas' diary, one of only eighteen still known to be in existence from that period, provides a nearly unique insight into the lives and times of a frontier, colonial family covering a span of fifty-two years.

That diary, by the way, was nearly lost forever in the flood and high tides of 1938. The last descendants of Thomas to live on the property at Stonington felt it important to protect the diary and other ancient Minor papers from fire. They were stored in a large safe placed in the cellar of the dwelling. And then came the flood!

The cellar filled to the rafters supporting the first floor. When the waters had finally receded, the family rushed into the cellar, opened the safe & out poured a torrent of salt water with the priceless documents floating on the cascade!

Each page of Thomas' diary was laboriously turned in the heat of the sun and, beyond belief, not one word, penned in ink, had run! The thought of placing a diary with a historical society or library for safekeeping was discussed from time to time, but after this near disaster, they were given to the State Library at Hartford, Connecticut, where they may be seen this day.

Almanacs were a scarce luxury at the time. Undoubtly, Thomas had seen copies, but did not possess one until March of 1668-69. His first use of the term in his diary was the first of March 1671-72: "An almanack for the yeare of our Lord: 1672, from the creation 5621. And the first yeare after the Leap yeare and the 24 of the reigne of our Lord King Charles the Second: March is the first moneth and hath 31 days; Friday the first..."

Without a calendar, or an almanac, it was vital that settlers living out in the wilderness develop and maintain some type of record as to the passing days, months and years. The keeping of a diary well served Thomas' needs. But, as I have noted, his entries were brief and to the point:

"The 10th month is December and hath 31 days. Monday the first I was still ill in my back -- The cellar was on fire -- ". Some time earlier, Thomas had fallen down his cellar stairs, which probably accounts for his reference to his back, but no further reference to the fire! or -- "The seventh month is September and hath 30 days: Satterday the first and Satterday the 8th -- Clement went to Pequit alone. wensday the 12 I made an end to sowing winter wheate and Satterday the 15 my wife was delivered of Hana..."

In 1658, feelings ran high in Stonington between partisans of Connecticut and Massachusetts. That is, between those who felt the town should belong to Massachusetts and those who felt it should go to Connecticut. Thomas was questioned at his father-in-law's house on the following points:

- As a leader to make a decision for the town.
- To take Captain Denison's place as leader.
- That he would deliver the town to Connecticut authorities, and
- For lightness (disrespect) in town.

Thomas made no record of the outcome of these accusations, accept to note later, "Because the Bay men (Massachusetts) begun in an unjust way to lay out mens land that they had in possession before the things wer wholy ended maks me to turne wholy to Coneticut and give them my list (taxable property list). The year 1658."

Thomas, together with his sons and a few native Indian laborers, worked long, hard hours as frontier farmers. They plowed the land, fenced, cut timber for lumber and firewood, weeded acres of land, mowed, made clapboards, threashed, sheared sheep, laid out farm lands for others, planted and harvested over one dozen types of vegetables and fruits...and still had time to attend to official town and colony business and engage the Indians in warfare.

From the 8th of December to the 8th of February, 1675-76, Thomas was active in the wars with the Indians -- and before and after those dates, he spent time in active fighting, coming home to plow or to harvest, and back again to the wars. He was sixty-eight years of age at the time.

A busy family man and farmer, yet, as I have noted, he had time and energy for his government -- This from his diary -- "This 24th of Aprill 1669. I Thomas Minor am by my accounts sixtie one yeares ould. I was by the town & this yeare chosen to be select man, The Towne Tresurer, The Townes Recorder, The brander of horses; by the General Courte recorded the head officer of the traineband; by the same courte one of the ffour that have the charge of the Milishcia of the whole countie and shossen and sworne Commissinor and one to assist in keeping the Countie courte."

Thomas recorded that during one court session held at a local house, "one settler was fined 25 pounds; John Benit and wife whipped upon the 13th of June 1661." Why the whipping?

Thomas was a hard working man and an involved citizen. There were times, however, when his spirits ran a bit high. On one occasion, he was asked, commanded, perhaps, to meet with several townsmen about his being reconciled to the church. He had seen the evil in his sudden and rash words to Mr. Blinman, one of his hired workmen, but those present agreed that it was Thomas who was wronged and both promised that the past was to be forgotten and they would do nothing to aggravate each other in the future.

There was a situation in his life which caused him great distress, a matter he reported in somewhat poetic form:

> "The 22 of July 1662: Its the day wherein I went astray in companie of two; yt p fessed they loved me well; But should we all hold on: I feare not only I but all had fell. My children, when I am dead let none els but your selves this reade, but do take heed of being with your p fessed friends misled. The two II nam to you: Remember well the time and you will finde it true: Thomas Stanton and William Chesebrough wer the men, But I with them at Shas was meerly chatched then. Oh, Lord, deliver and keep both me, and you from our corupt harts and them - - and so I say, Amen."

Coin of the realm was very scarce on the frontier; barter and Indian wampum was the common exchange. Thomas and his family needed shoes, so he put his signature to a contract which was to take a great deal of his hard-earned crops.

He wrote:

"This present writing witnesseth that I Nehemiah Roice, Shewmaker of New London, do heareby ingage to supplie with shews Thomas Minor and his familie for this year next insuing, the date heare of as foloweth begining at the first of March till next, 1663. The first of March: viz: shews of nins at 4 shilling six pence; levens at 5 shillings 6 pence; Twelves at 6 shillings and 13 teens at six and six pence if plaine or wooden heels. Also, I Thomas Minor, doe heare by ingage to pay for all of my shews in pease or Indian coren 3 shillings per bushell; wheat at 4 shillings per bushell; butter and good merchatabell cheese, etc---as witnes our hands this 20th of Februarie 1661."

Thomas noted natural phenomenon as well. He saw a "blasing star" in early December, 1664; "Saw the blassing star in the est about the rissing of the day star," in April, 1665. And "The 26 day of FFebruarie 1667 being wensday we saw the blase appear in the skie near the southwest or south west and be west. It was verie loung and sharp at the lower end."

Mid-summer, I talked with the comet expert at the Griffith Park Observatory in Los Angeles about these sightings. I was informed that the comet of 1664 and 1665, or for that matter, any comet in these early days are simply recorded as the "Comet of 1664", etc. Thomas, in noting the comet of February 1667 might be thought of as being in conflict with current records regarding that comet in as much as the records show the comet to have appeared in February, 1668. However, keep in mind that, undoubtly, Thomas should have listed the sighting as February 1667/68.

He corresponded often with his cousin, William, of Bristol. The question of how to spell his name came up, often. Thomas' name was spelled most often M I N O R. However, for example, in a deed transferring land to Thomas, his name throughout is spelled M Y N O R. Cousin William's response was finally received in Stonington in the form of a scroll on deposit today in Hartford, Connecticut. The scroll spelled out Thomas' genealogical background and went into some detail as to the origin of the name and, subsequently, spelling.

Nevertheless, whether we spell our name M I N E R or M I N O R, those of us who have descended from Thomas proudly look back on his great contribution to our way of life in America. He was a hard-working father, husband and citizen. He cared deeply about his newly founded country and way of life -- and gave considerable personal time to develop and maintain it.

In the life of Thomas Minor we have a prominent example of those men, who, with their families, came to the "New World" and fulfilled a purpose of time in creating a people of illimitable resources, jealous of personal rights, with brawny arms and fertile brain and with the unconquerable perserverance so characterestic of the pioneer settlers who attacked the forces of nature's wilderness that a nation might be built for the world to respect.

It is left to you and to me to see to it that Thomas' efforts, his life work, was not lived in vain. We owe much to him and have so much to do if we are to be faithful to his dreams for all his children.

Thank you.

GREETINGS TO THE MINER FAMILY AND TO THE VICAR

AND PARISH OF ST. ANDREWS

FROM THE STONINGTON, CONNECTICUT HISTORICAL SOCIETY

* * * * * *

It is with a sense of honor and pride that we in present-day Stonington regard our pioneering first settlers. Lt. Thomas Minor was one of these stalwart men. He was born in Chew Magna, Somersetshire, England, April 23, 1608 and settled in Stonington with his family in 1653 beside a still beautiful cove, called Quiambaug.

Before coming to Connecticut he had lived in four towns in Massachusetts on the coast near Boston, and in 1645 was one of John Winthrop Jr.'s colony in the settlement of Pequot, which is now New London. Like his friends, William Chesebrough, Thomas Stanton and his father-in-law Walter Palmer, whose names and coats-of-arms also appear on our monument here beside his resting place, Thomas Miner was an outstanding person. Loving husband to his wife Grace and father of ten children, he was a hardworking farmer, whose many skills in agricultural activities called for a greater knowledge than that found in a specialized, modern farmer.

Thomas Miner was also prominent in public office and he helped to organize our first Stonington church, The First Congregational, in 1674.

This year, being the 350th anniversary of the departure of the good ship, "Lyons Whelp" from Gravesend with 40 planters out of the counties of Dorset and Somerset, among whom was Thomas Miner, it is indeed fitting that this admirable man be fondly remembered on both sides of the Atlantic.

Finally, we would like to express our appreciation to John A. Miner, for doing so much to enlighten us about Thomas Miner and his family.

DEDICATION

THE THOMAS MINOR PLAQUE

Written by John A. Miner

Read by W. Avery Miner, President of the Thomas Minor Society

On August 21, 1899, several hundred people assembled at the old burying ground in Stonington, Connecticut to dedicate a monument to the memory of the town's founders: William Chesebrough, Thomas Minor, Walter Palmer and Thomas Stanton.

Samuel Chesebro, presiding officer for the occasion, noted that "history records our ancestors as able and concientious men -- men of honor and principle, who were distinguished in their day and generation, and whose memory we should delight to honor. Year after year had passed, generation after generation had come and gone, until more than two centuries had elapsed before any steps were taken to perpetuate the memory of the founders of our town."

Mr. Chesebro continued, "This omission cannot be charged to the sons and daughters of Stonington for lack of respect for their ancestors but rather to the old saying, 'what is everybody's business is nobody's business.' No one seemed to make an effort in the right direction, and thus it was allowed to remain for the present generation, on the 250th anniversary of the settlement of the town, to be the first to dedicate a monument to the memory of these worthy men."

Some eighty years following the dedication of that monument in Stonington, descendants of Thomas Minor gather at the home of his birth to honor him on the 350th anniversary of his departure for the new world.

Those of us gathered here today are not to be especially blessed for what we do, though each of us is justly proud to be in this place and circumstance. For we can say with Samuel Chesebro, "What has been everybody's business has been nobody's business."

What is important and noteworthy is that descendants of Thomas Minor have at last met here to honor his life and his work.

In dedicating this plaque, we who are assembled here today act in the name of Thomas' descendants, everywhere.

May each of us be worthy of the heritage he gave us. As we view this beautifully rendered plaque, let us, as hopefully will others who come after us, remember the man, proudly and with gratitude.
